Women's Common Sense Mellon Quotes Franklin Gen. Wood's Automobile Aged One, and Deported

—By Arthur Brisbane

Copyright, 1929 King Features Synd., Inc.

NAMING A COMMISSION TO STUDY law enforcement, President Hoover wisely includes one woman. Dr. Ada L. Comstock.

Her experience as an educator will enable her to tell other members that the turn toward crime is taken in childhood.

Furthermore, women's common sense often enables them to take short cuts that men would not find.

Secretary Mellon will not resign. He himself is authority for that statement.

That is good news for the whole country, particularly good news for President Hoover, who understands business and knows what it means to have in the treasury the ablest business man in America.

Mr. Mellon says, quoting Benjamin Franklin, "I am deficient. I am afraid, in the Christian virtue of resignation."

We are prosperous, the automobile industry proves it.

In April, 620,656 automobiles were produced, at the rate of nearly eight and a half million automobiles a year.

Gen. Wood, head of Sears Roebuck, admits that the firm is considering automobile distribution, adding that Sears Roebuck never market anything that requires service, once it is sold.

However, Gen. Wood can sell a million cars a year at a low enough price, so that service will spring up quickly enough. He now sells more automobile tires than any other concern in the world.

Elisa Valerio, aged one year, was smuggled into this country by her young Italian mother, as a stowaway on the liner President Wilson.

You can't do that sort of thing in this proud government, and Elisa will be deported with her mother.

It seems a pity not to keep the youngest stowaway on record. For all we know, Elisa Valerio may be a direct descendant of Christopher Columbus.

Perhaps some vaudeville or moving picture institution will give guarantees necessary to keep the energetic young mother and her baby in America.

Every country needs such mothers.

The mother of William the Conqueror, whom the Duke of Normandy first met when she was washing clothes in a brook, was something like Elisa Valerio's mother, undoubtedly.

On June 6, Pope Pius will leave the Vatican, taking part personally in the Corpus Christi procession to St. Peter's sq.

No Pope has left the Vatican in 59 years. The predecessor of Pope Pius, since 1870, knew that their election meant the rest of life, and then death, within the Vatican walls.

Millions of Catholics will rejoice that the agreement with the government of Italy and a restoration of limited temporal power puts an end to this long, self-imposed imprisonment.

Paris reports that representatives of the Allies have agreed on a letter to Dr. Schacht, of the German debt commission, unanimously accepting some of the German offers in connection with the debt settlement.

That settlement will soon be made. Then will come a great boom in the German prosperity, probably leading the rest of Europe.

President Hoover makes public his conviction that the Supreme Court decision, setting aside Interstate Commerce Commission findings hostile to railroad values, will not increase railway rates.

That will not discourage railroad management. The Supreme Court decision will permit railroads to keep a much greater part of what they earn. That is what the railroads want.

Mr. Ashton, president of the American Railway Association, says this is the most careless nation on earth, wastes every year ten thousand millions of dollars, and "this amount is nothing compared to the enormous loss in human life attributed to carelessness."

President Hoover's commission on prosperity, outlining our gigantic resources, added that Americans had barely scratched the surface of national wealth.

As an efficiency engineer, President Hoover may suggest a way of cutting down waste.

We make a great fuss, as we should do, about ten billions lent to Europe, and we waste that amount every year.

AMERICAN PRAISED ON POWER

Chicago, May 22—"If the liberty of the American press is lost, the liberty of the American people will go overboard with it," said Col. Robert Ewing, Sr., president of the Southern Newspaper Publishers' Association, discussing the significance of the pleas of the newspapers by the Power Trust before 250 editors and publishers here today.

Col. Ewing recalled that the Boston Evening American's expose had brought the question before the public. He told how that paper

LINDY AND 4 WOMEN HOP OFF

North Hayen, Me., May 22—Col. Charles A. Lindbergh, his fiancee, Anne Morrow, and other members of the Morrow family left the Morrow summer home on this island at noon today after a visit of four days.

Lindbergh took the amphibian cabin plane from the recently constructed field in front of the Morrow home and then landed a short distance off shore where the four women were awaiting him in a rowboat.

The flying colonel entered the open cockpit of the amphibian, which had been standing a few hundred feet in front of the house,

OPTION AND BANK MEN QUIZZED

Seeking the facts of the $1,750,000 Exchange st. widening deal, which the Finance Commission reported was "permeated with fraud," District Attorney William J. Foley, acting through two assistants, today launched an independent investigation of the transaction.

Four Boston men, all well known in the real estate business, were called to the courthouse for questioning and all responded.

The names of all figured in testimony regarding the land taking before the Finance Commission.

1 DYING, 4 HURT IN DYNAMITE BLAST

Springfield, May 22—One man is dying and four others are severely injured as a result of being struck by flying rocks in dynamite blasting at Blandford, 20 miles northeast of here, scene of construction of a new $5,000,000 dam for the Springfield water system.

Lawrence Jarvis, 21, of this city, was struck on the head. More than four tons of rocks from the blasting hurtled through the air.

Hearsts Are Guests of the President

Washington, May 22 (INS)—William Randolph Hearst, the publisher, and Mrs. Hearst were luncheon guests of the President and Mrs. Hoover at the White House today.

London Divorcee Bride of Count

London, May 22 (AP) — The Express today says that Mrs. David Plunkett Greene, a prominent London society woman who obtained a divorce last October, had been married to Count Anthony de Bosdari in Berlin.

The engagement of the count and Miss Talluiah Bankhead, American actress, was broken by mutual consent early this month. The count was engaged to another actress, Enid Stamp Taylor, in 1926, but that was also broken. His marriage to Josephine Fish of Chicago last year was subsequently annulled.

BLIMP HUNTS LOST PLANE

Trenton, N. J., May 22 (INS)—The two-months mystery of the disappearance of a Sikorsky Amphibian plane bearing T. Roy Finucane, Rochester sportsman, and party, was attacked again today with the aid of a blimp from the Lakehurst naval air station.

The semi-rigid dirigible began a slow and careful flight over the treacherous bogs and quicksand mires of Bear Swamp, N. J., between Red Lion and Tabernacle. Equipped with powerful binoculars, the officers and crew of the blimp made a minute scrutiny of the 15-mile swamp, which is impenetrable by foot.

Maine Man, 100 Sunday, Is Dead

Steep Falls, Me., May 22 (AP)—Guideon M. Tucker, who passed his 100th birthday on Sunday, died today.

He made two South American voyages as a boy with his uncle, Daniel Marshall, a ship owner and master of Salem, Mass., and engaged in lumbering in northern Maine for several seasons before he settled here. He had been one of the most extensive timber operators in this section.

He leaves three sons and two daughters, including Frederick J. Tucker, a Chicago real estate dealer, and John L. Tucker, a Chicago newspaper editor.

Lamont Is Kept Busy Declining Bids to Deliver Speeches

Washington, May 22 (AP)—One of the biggest problems Secretary Lamont finds in running the Department of Commerce is thinking up good reasons for not making speeches.

This was revealed today by the secretary before the convention of the freight claim division of the American Railway Association.

"I was in business 30 years," he said, "and nobody ever asked me to make a speech. But now I receive on an average three speech requests a day."

GIRL, 14, TRIES TO KILL SELF

With three scrawled notes pinned to her dress, Stacer Kisofsky, 14, convinced of the futility of life, today lay down in the kitchen of her home in South st., Quincy Point, turned on the gas, placed the end of a tube in her mouth and waited for death.

Her brother John, 11, found her, called aid and the girl was sent to Quincy Hospital, where it was said she would live.

The letters explaining her actions were addressed to her mother, her father, Carl Kisofsky, said to the police, to whom she addressed a plea to prevent the mother, Mrs. Chepiski, from taking poison.

The girl seized the opportunity for self-destruction when she was alone in the house, her mother being at the home of neighbors and her stepfather at work. After closing the kitchen doors and windows she disconnected the burner end of a tube leading to a gas jet.

Only the opportune appearance of her younger brother saved her

WOMAN WINS IN POLE HOLE WAR

Victory still rode today with the Fitzpatrick repulsing forces in Oakton rd., Dorchester, where the telephone company seeks vainly to erect one last remaining pole.

But the "Pole Hole War" is not yet over, for although Joseph F. O'Connell, counsel for Mrs. Mary Fitzpatrick, marshal of the repulsing forces, declared Mayor Nichols had ordered the poles down and no more erected, this was denied at the Mayor's office.

According to the attorney, the Mayor sent a letter to telephone company officials, warning them that their action was illegal. At the Mayor's office it was said

Gets $1500 for His 1906 Auto

Hawthorne, Nev., May 22 (AP)—After a 20-year wait Martin Chiatovich has found a buyer for his automobile.

He received a letter from the Smithsonian Institution of Washington offering him $1500 for his 1906 Pope-Hartford touring car, including the bucket seats.

In accepting the offer Chiatovich said the car runs as good now as it did 18 years ago, but it burns too much gasoline.

SMITH WINS IN FRENCH GOLF

St. Cloud, France, May 22 (AP)—Horton Smith, Joplin, Mo., won the Freuih professional golf championship here today.

Smith won with a 72-hole score of 273, scoring 71 in his final 18 this afternoon. His four rounds were: 68-66-70-71.

Aubrey Boomer, professional of the St. Cloud Club, was second, five strokes behind the Joplin youth.

Smith was 21 years of age today and after the last hole was played the big gallery gathered about him real estate dealer, who represented the First National aBnk in handling the property, part of which the city later purchased, was questioned by Asst. Dist. Attys. Frederick T. Doyle and Joseph Sullivan, as was Daniel J. Cronin, real estate broker.

4 REALTY MEN ARE QUIZZED

When the two members of the district attorney's staff finished with them and emerged from the Grand Jury room, which was chosen as a convenient place for the quizzing, they found Joseph Paul and Abram Lipp waiting in the corridor. Doyle asked them to return later.

STUDIED DEAL 3 WEEKS

Paul and Lipp figured in the Finance Commission testimony as members of a group who obtained options on the property in question from time to time. Some of the members of this group finally purchased part of the lot.

Asked if any others would be questioned today, Assistant District Attorney Doyle said that questioning of Paul and Lipp would take all afternoon.

Calling of these four men followed completion of a study by Doyle and District Attorney Foley of the complete record of evidence garnered by the Finance Commission at its hearings on the city's downtown purchases. They have been pouring over the extensive record both days and evenings for nearly two weeks.

Today's action was the first intimation that the Suffolk County prosecutor intended to conduct an independent probe of the transaction.

WAITED FOR DETAILS

Reports recently that the Grand Jury wanted to investigate were met by him with the assertion that he would not act until he had studied the complete transcript of evidence, with a view to judging whether there was any evidence of criminality.

The Finance Commission report was directed to Governor Allen and the legislature, but a copy was sent to Dist. Atty. Foley, who asked for and received the complete record of the hearings. Atty.-Gen. Warner now has the report which Gov ernor Allen received.

Herbert F. Winslow was the "nominee" of the First National Bank in the transaction, according to the evidence before the Finance Commission, he was designated to represent the bank after it obtained the site at State and Exchange sts. from Lee, Higginson & Co.

CRONIN WAS BROKER

Cronin, it was brought out in testimony, acted as a broker between Winslow and other men at various times procured options on the property.

When the city came into the deal, it paid $1,750,000 for four-elevenths of the lot, whereas, according to testimony taken by the Finance Commission, certain Boston men obtained the remainder of the lot for approximately $85,000. Experts paid the city paid from $500,000 to $700,000 too much.

LAW PROBERS URGED TO SHUN PETTY POINTS

New York, May 22 (AP)—Richard Washburn Child, author, diplomat and acting chairman of the National Crime Commission, made public today a letter to George W. Wickersham, chairman of President Hoover's new national law enforcement commission, in which he expressed his personal opinion that distinction should be made between "normal laws" and "governmental commandments."

"I reiterate my belief," he wrote, "that a distinction should be made between law on the books and social will as it is found in fact. The tragedy of the national infection of disrespect for law may be increased and not diminished by insistence that all so-called laws stand upon one footing.

"I do not say that the eighteenth amendment and its resulting congressional commandments cannot be enforced. I do say that few persons in the nation, will fail to distinguish between this law and normal laws.

"It is with a profound sense of my duty as a citizen, and with deep anxiety, that I call attention in this open letter to the deplorable result of failure to distinguish with broad vision rather than with technical pettiness between laws and commandments, and between law in the engrossed words and law of the social will. If the minds of the multitude make this distinction and therefore maintain the germ of respect for law, how great would be the disaster if your commission served not to uphold this distinction, if it is valid, but instead broke it down."

soon after 11 o'clock. He spent some time at the controls then started the motor and ran it for some time to warm it up.

Then he throttled it down, stepped from the cockpit and spoke to members of the Morrow family who had gathered near the plane.

He re-entered the cockpit, had the blocks pulled from beneath the wheels and taxied the plane to the further side of the upper end of the improvised landing field.

TRAVEL LIGHT

The plane was turned about there by laborers and he taxied down the field, gathering speed, and shot into the air at some distance from the rock-strewn beach.

As soon as they were settled Lindbergh drove the plane down Penobscot Bay for a short distance and leaving the water headed south after circling the island. Before he tested his motor Lindbergh carried out a lunch basket and several pieces of baggage which he placed in the cabin.

It was believed that the party would not return to the summer home for some time, at least, because they returned to the Rev. H. F. Huss an automobile which they borrowed during their short stay here.

SUSPECT FREED.

Taken into custody as a suspicious person because he was reported prowling about the Morrow estate, Robert Tondero, 40, who came here from Mexico City, was released today after long questioning.

Police said that Tondero satisfied them he was an inventor eager to demonstrate certain mechanical models to Col. Lindbergh and that he had no sinister motive in being here.

"Col. Lindbergh is the best of them all," were words he used in explaining his mission, the authorities said.

Capture of the stranger, who is a German but who has spent considerable time in the land across the Rio Grande came in the midst of excitement precipitated by the death threat received by Constance Morrow, younger sister of Anne, "Lindy's" bride-to-be.

PRECAUTIONS TAKEN

He was taken across Penobscot bay to Rockland in a motor boat, technically "under surveillance." He made no objections to the trip.

A message urging extreme precautions has been received from Ambassador Morrow, who is still in Mexico City, and, due to this and other developments, the guard around the estate is being greatly augmented and a special deputy sheriff is to be appointed by authority of High Sheriff Frank Harding of Knox county.

The death letter received by Constance has no apparent affect on the spirits of the remainder of the family. Mrs. Morrow did not forego her usual afternoon of golf with her sister-in-law, Mrs. Josephine Aldrich, though a cold, drizzling rain swept across the North Haven links from the sea.

AIR MUSKETEER TO TRY AGAIN

Roosevelt Field, N. Y., May 22 (INS)—Undaunted by the accident which ended their attempt to set a new endurance record, Lieut. Henry B. Clarke, Martin Jensen and William Ulbrich planned to make another try today in their plane, "Three Musketeers."

The fliers were forced to land when the hook flew up and tore the fabric on the stabilizer during an unsuccessful attempt to refuel from a ground catapult. They had been aloft only 5 hours and 40 minutes.

The fabric was repaired.

HUNT MAN FOR MORROW GIRL DEATH NOTE

Acting on an anonymous telephone "tip," Newton and Westwood police began a hunt in Medford, Arlington and Lexington today for a former Westwood farmhand, in connection with the $50,000 threat letter sent to Constance Morrow.

The farmhand left Westwood six months ago, and is now employed on an estate in one of the three north-of-Boston communities.

According to Police Chief Driscoll of Westwood, who started the hunt with Police Inspector Flanagan of Dedham, the farmhand is recalled as one almost with a mania for writing letters and sending postcards.

He was employed on a Grove st. farm while in Westwood, and knew thoroughly the district, including the stone wall behind which Miss Morrow was instructed to place the $50,000.

The threat letter to Col. Lindbergh's future sister-in-law was the fifth of similar character received by prominent persons within the past four years, four of the letters having been received by local personages.

The fifth was sent in 1925 to parents of Kenneth Rawson of Chicago, who accompanied Donald MacMillan on an expedition into the Arctic. The letter threatened death to the boy if $50,000 were not forthcoming.

Similar threat letters have been received by Mrs. Lars Anderson of the Weld estate, Brookline; Mrs. Charles Sumner Bird of Walpole and Mrs. Curtis Guild of 124 Marlborough st., widow of ex-Governor Guild.

These three letters also instructed that the money be placed behind stone walls bordering estates in Grove st., Westwood.

Despite threats of death to her daughter Constance and the capture of a mysterious visitor bent on penetrating the ring of armed guards about her home in the hope of interviewing Col. Lindbergh, Mrs. Dwight W Morrow continues to "carry on." She plays her usual round of golf each day and is unperturbed by all the excitement. (I. N. R. photo.)

EDITORS TOLD OF POWER'S MENACE

had revealed one held of the power trust on the Boston Herald and Boston Traveler.

"The fighting spirit of William Randolph Hearst's Boston Evening American," Col. Ewing continued, "has saved the situation from becoming more grave than it is. Mr. Hearst is to be congratulated in exposing and checking the invasion of the vested interests into the sacred precincts of independent thought and speech.

"When the people of this country lose faith in their newspapers the foundations of American liberties will rot away."

Col. Ewing was speaking at the opening of today's session of the Inland Daily Press Association. He warned that the battle is not over, though it is being won by the hosts of independent newspapers.

"We must carry on the fight to the end. There can be no compromise with the International Paper and Power Company. The free, unprejudiced conduct of newspapers as the purveyors of public opinion is one of the fundamentals of American government.

"This exposé by the Boston Evening American forced the federal commission to step in. Their hearings have revealed that the International Paper & Power Company had invested heavily in 13 leading American dailies, including the Chicago Daily News and Chicago Daily Journal.

"If the newspapers give in to the vested interests—allow them to take control—they will lose their favorable postal rates and other considerations given them as quasi-public institutions."

Hub "Torch" Suspect Freed by Police

Boston police today released the man arrested in the South End and held as suspect in the Harrisburg, Pa., "torch murder" case.

The prisoner proved to the police that he had no knowledge of the crime. Inspector Funck of the State police patrol of Harrisburg, who has been in Boston three weeks, declared himself satisfied.

NICHOLS IN 'WAR' ON POLES

Mayor Nichols had not interfered and would not interfere with any business coming under jurisdiction of the street. commissioners.

MAY USE AXES

Meanwhile, with Mrs. Fitzpatrick and Miss Mary Frances MacPherson, a neighbor, taking turns in sitting on the site of the flow filled-in hole, neighbors were threatening to chop down other poles on the street.

There was also a collection being taken in the neighborhood to defray expenses of a legal battle against the telephone company.

PLANS NIGHT SHIFT

Lacking word from headquarters to end the war, one of the telephone workers informed Mrs. Fitzpatrick, as she sat on "post," that the telephone pole would be raised at night when she was off her guard.

Mrs. Fitzpatrick retaliated that a 24-hour watch would be maintained daily by herself and the neighbors, but that if the telephone people did succeed in recapturing the spot of ground and working on the pole at night she would have them arrested for disturbing the peace.

Meanwhile the contractor, who is paving the recently accepted street, declared that he will go ahead and pave right around the old telephone pole which stands two feet out from the present curb.

The third day of the anti-pole war began with almost a riot in Oakton rd. but, as usual, Mrs. Fitzpatrick, district "Joan d'Arc," emerged victorious.

Police were called and came clopclopping into the war terrain—only to discover relievedly that they had no right to thumb into such a quarrel.

The neighbors were all out early and they buzzed around the telephone company officials, exciting those already embarrassed individuals.

GIRL STANDS PAT

Like a real field marshal and strategist, Mrs. Fitzpatrick stole a march on the enemy just after sunup and filled up the hole at which she sat all day Monday.

When the telephone workers and officials arrived, confident that they would be able to go immediately to work and raise the remaining pole in their new site, Mrs. Fitzpatrick was standing guard.

The exchange of words began, but Mrs. Fitzpatrick only smiled and continued to stand—just as if she were riding in a street car.

"You have no right holding up this work," the telephone company foreman informed her. "You can't hold it up."

"But I am," she replied tersely —and very correctly.

The ordinary workmen resigned themselves to the not unwelcome inactivity, allowing their foreman to speak their cause.

"Why did you fill up that hole?" the foreman demanded.

"It looked so empty and foolish," Mrs. Fitzpatrick said. "Besides someone was liable to fall into it."

After an hour's vigilance, Mrs. Fitzpatrick was relieved at her post by Miss Mary McPherson, a neighbor, of Oakton ave., and the militant field marshal went into the house and to breakfast, leaving the telephone workers, the police and neighbors still checkmated.

33 Thrown Out of Work in Vt. Fire

East Granville, Vt., May 22 (AP) —Thirty-three persons were thrown out of work and damage estimated at $50,000 was caused by a fire which swept the Demeritt Dickerson Novelty Company's mill here.

Fire apparatus from Randolph and Northfield responded and pumped water from a river.

WON'T CALL FULLER OR LOWELL

By agreement of counsel for both defendant and Commonwealth, President A. Lawrence Lowell of Harvard University and President Samuel W. Stratton of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology will not be called to testify in the trial of Harry J. Canter of East Boston, charged with slandering former Governor Fuller during the Sacco-Vanzetti case.

At a conference held today in the district attorney's office between the two college presidents, Asst. Dist. Atty. David J. Gillen and Atty Harry Hoffman, counsel for Canter, an agreement was reached as to what they would testify to if compelled to appear as witnesses.

When the trial opens late today Atty Gillen will inform the court of the agreement reached and offer the statements of Pres. Lowell and Pres. Stratton. The court will then rule whether they are admissible.

FULLER WON'T TESTIFY

Asst. Dist.-Atty. Gillen also announced that former Governor Fuller would not appear as a witness in the case. He explained that the former governor had no part in the prosecution and that his recourse would be to institute civil actions.

Both Pres. Lowell and Pres. Stratton appeared early today at the courthouse in answer to witness subpoenas issued at the request of the defense counsel. The conference in the district attorney's office began shortly after they arrived.

It was revealed that last minute efforts to effect a compromise whereby the case could be withdrawn from jury trial failed when the defendant refused to accept the views of both counsel.

BASED ON PLACARD.

Asst. Dist. Atty. Gillen said he would call but three witnesses, a police captain and two patrolmen. The defense has summoned a large array of witnesses.

The charge against Canter is based on a placard he is alleged to have carried in front of the State House when it was picketed by Sacco-Vanzetti sympathizers. The placard read, "Fuller, Murderer of Sacco and Vanzetti."

Judge Robert P. Raymond will preside at the trial. The case would ordinarily be heard by Judge Harold Williams, but he declined to preside on the ground that he was district attorney at an early stage of the Sacco-Vanzetti case and might be construed as prejudiced.

"Fellowship Night" in College Av. Church

"Fellowship Night" will be observed tonight at the College Ave. Methodist Church, West Somerville. The program will be in charge of the pastor, Rev. Lynn J. Radcliffe, and the principal speaker will be Rev. Dr. C. C. P. Hiller, superintendent of the Lynn district.

Sent to Prison

St. Louis, May 22 (AP)—William A. Brooks, former St. Louis investment broker, convicted with George A. Grieble, Cleveland architect, of using the mails to defraud in connection with the sale of $500,000 in building bonds, was sentenced to three years in Leavenworth Federal Prison. Grieble was sentenced to four years.

TWO PLANES TO START SEA HOP IN MAINE

Old Orchard Beach, Me., May 22 —Interest in a possible transatlantic air race was intensified today when Armeno Lotti, sponsor of the flight to Paris of the monoplane, Bernard 191, announced definitely the start would be made from here.

The announcement came after had made a 90-minute examination of the three-mile beach, and while Roger Q. Williams, with his navigator, Lewis A. Yancey, were giving test flights to the Pellanca monoplane, Green Flash, preparatory to hopping off to Rome tomorrow.

Lotti said the Bernard 191 would be flown here from Roosevelt Field either late today or tomorrow morning, probably the latter because of the mud at the Long Island airport.

Guiseppi M. Bellance, designer of the Green Flash, who arrived on the train with Lotti, supervised the gasoline consumption tests in the ship in which Martin Jensen and Elmer Smith, both Brooks boo ers, endurance records.

The first test was made shortly after 6 o'clock, when with the sun appearing for the first time in days, the big monoplane roared down the hard-packed beach for three-quarters of a mile and then lifted smoothly into the air.

Williams made his second flight shortly before 9 o'clock, and expected to make several more checking gasoline consumption carefully.

It was stated that the French fliers has planned to carry 1000 gallons of gasoline if they took off from Roosevelt Field, but because of the longer and harder runway here they can add 100 gallons.

The Green Flash, which has had 307 hours in the air before today's tests, appeared to be under perfect control and in the best of condition.

Fliers Warned of Bad Weather Over Atlantic

New York, May 22 (AP)—The New York Weather Bureau today warned against any takeoff on the two proposed transatlantic flights. Head winds and rain are reported a few hundred miles out over the ocean and squalls and cloudy weather would be encountered near the European coast, Dr. James H. Kimball of the bureau said.

The weather is ideal at Old Orchard, Me., the storm which drifted up along the New England coast yesterday being now off Newfoundland.

PLANE REFUELS 7TH TIME IN AIR

Fort Worth, Tex., May 22 (AP)—Nearing the end of the third day in the air, the endurance monoplane "Fort Worth" was refueled with 110 gallons of gasoline early today in the seventh contact with the auxiliary ship since it took off at 11:33 a. m., Sunday.

The plane, piloted by Reg L. Robbins and James Kelly, completed its 68th hour aloft at 7:33 a. m. The "Question Marks" record was 160 hours.

BOY DRIVER WILL PAY PENALTY

Louis Weiner, 20, of Revere, driver of the car in which five boy companions were killed at Point of Pines, will be prosecuted to the limit, his right to operate an automobile will be definitely suspended, and his name placed permanently on a black list.

Announcement to this effect was made today by Registrar of Motor Vehicles George A. Parker, in a statement on what he characterized as the "two frightful tragedies of yesterday."

Referring to the South Walpole accident, in which a man and his wife were killed, Parker said the unsafe condition of the bridge fence "should not have been so long neglected."

BLAMES PARENTS

Regarding the Point of Pines bridge tragedy, in which "the wild driving of Louis Weiner resulted in the death of his five young companions," Capt. Parker said: "It is in the first place incomprehensible that parents will allow a young son to purchase, or purchase for him, a high-powered touring car when they must have known that as an applicant for a license to drive he had already been rejected three times by the registry examiners.

PROSECUTE TO LIMIT

"So far as this office is concerned, this young man will be prosecuted to the limit, his right to operate will be indefinitely suspended and his name will be placed permanently on our black list as a person unfit to have a license.

The officials found Weiner slowly recovering from his injuries, and it was stated he would be able to leave the hospital in a few days

Weiner was owner and operator of a touring car which, after side swiping two other machines, plunged 40 feet from the Point of Pines bridge to the tracks of the Boston, Revere Beach and Lynn railroad.

Of seven occupants of the auto which made the trip, Louis Weiner and one other were in stantly killed. Gasoline flames swept the wreckage and charred the five bodies.

In Revere high school, which the five victims attended, classes were suspended and memorial services held. Taps were blown by a bugler of the high school band.

School was dismissed at noon and Principal Augustus Whalen announced that Coach O'Connell, a delegation of teachers from high school and grammar schools at the funerals of four of the boys, all members of the Jewish faith. The fifth, James Jimjimian will be buried on Friday.

life, according to hospital officials.

The letters were as follows:

"Dear Mother: I am sorry I have to leave you, but I can't help it. I can't stand your suffering for me. I know you want me to grow up and help you, but I can't help you. Please do not try suicide yourself, because I want you to live yet. Please do not cry or talk about me because I will hear you. I hope you will come and live with me soon. Dear Mother, do not worry about me.

"Signed" "Your Daughter."

NOTE TO POLICE

"Dear Police," the letter to the authorities was addressed. "Please do not question anyone in my house about me at all because I could not live.

"Please find my own real father, whose name is Carl Kisofsky. He lived in New York. I do not know where he is now. Please give the letters to my real mother and father.

"Please do not let mother stay in the house. She will take poison again. She took poison three times already and I do not want her to take it again.

"Please don't let me recover. I won't be able to live in the house again. That is all I can tell you."

To her father she wrote: "Dear Father: Do not blame anybody for me. I could not stand my mother crying all the time. I could not stand it any longer so I hoped that I could die so I won't see mother suffering any longer. I have to end my life and nobody else is to blame for me.

"Please take care of mother, because I cannot take her with me to rest in peace. I know how you will fell, but I can't help it."

Leniency Asked for Boy Slayer

Pulaski, N. Y., May 22 (AP)—The Oswego County Grand Jury today handed a presentment to the court in which they recommended that Paul Arquette, 14 year old farm hand of Albion be charged with first degree manslaughter in indictments court for the slaying of his employer Adelbert Kitts, May 7. The boy had been charged with first degree murder.

LOEWS PART TO 'REVIVE LOVE OF THEIR YOUTH'

HEIRS TO FILM MILLIONS ARE 'FOOLING FATE'

New York, May 22 (INS)—After nine years of marriage, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur M. Loew, heirs to motion picture millions, are testing their love by a separation, it was learned today.

It is a "separation for self-respect," and by it the couple hope to revive the love of their youth.

The beautiful daughter of Adolph Zukor, head of the Paramount-Famous-Lasky Motion Picture Company, and the son of the late film theatre magnate, Marcus Loew, revealed they are attempting to "fool fate" by their strange separation.

They have parted to retain respect for each other rather than remain together until domestic conditions become intolerable.

Loew inherited $10,000,000 of his father's great fortune.

WIFE ACCUSED BY HUSBAND TRIED TO DIE

Testifying that she attempted suicide because her husband accused her of wrong, Mrs. Natalie V. Carvelle of Watertown sought a divorce today in Middlesex probate court from Frank Carvelle. She charged cruel and abusive treatment, and her husband did not contest the suit. Judge Beane took it under advisement.

"My husband stepped between my partner and me at a christening dance, and before the whole assemblage said I was a 'rotten bum,'" testified Mrs. Carvelle. "On reaching home he accused me of unfaithfulness, and I went into the bathroom, locked the door and turned on the gas. I woke up in a hospital and returned to him four weeks later."

Mrs. Carvelle told Judge Beane also that her husband slapped her face and split her lip on one occasion when she asked him to get some coal and wood. The couple were married in 1922 and she asked custody of their one child, a daughter, four years old.

Declaring that her husband punched her in the face while she was sleeping, nearly breaking her nose, Mrs. Lucy Rondina of Pacific st., Cambridge, asked a divorce from Jospeh Rondina of Adams ave., West Newton, and also requested custody of a child, Ambrose, two, who is now with his father. This case was also taken under advisement. It was contested.

Mrs. Rondina, who said she was married in July, 1925, testified further that her husband placed the point of a bread knife against her and threatened to run it through her, and also beat her with his razor strap.

DANCE ON GRASS IN BARE FEET

Barefooted sophomores of Simmons College, celebrating May Day, danced on the wet grass near the college at 6 a. m. today. The girls leaped high in their flimsy costumes in order to keep warm. Girls from the other classes sat or stood around wearing fur overcoats and applauded.

Music for the dancing nymphs was supplied by Velma Trull of Leverett, Doris Woodward of Malden and Harriet Hannary on banjos and guitars.

The barefoot dancers included Alice Fullam of North Brookfield, Alice Luellen of Mountain Lakes, N. J.; Mary Batt of Fall River, Ida Brooks of Asbury Park, N. J.; Helen Crimmins of Leominster and Jeannette Frye of Gloversville, N. Y.

Miss Marion Spearin of Swampscott was "Queen of the May," and Miss Marian Henriquez of Havana, Cuba, was "King." Both wore regal garments. Some of the girls were attired in grotesque costumes to add a touch of humor.

At the conclusion of the program sandwiches, strawberry shortcake and much relished hot coffee were served.

2 MEN HELD IN SKIRT THEFT

Max Norman of Astoria st., and his brother, Bernard, of Willowood st., Mattapan, were arrested by Inspectors Dorsey and Angusta of headquarters today on charges of conspiracy and larceny of $4100 from the Puritan Skirt Manufacturing Co. of Beach st.

According to police, an inside man took goods from the company's store and turned them over to the Norman brothers.

1,333,000 LEFT BY COHASSET WOMAN

Mrs. Elizabeth D. Parker of Beach st., Cohasset, who was found dead in a New York hotel under circumstances that caused police investigation, left an estate of $1,333,635, an inventory revealed today when filed at Dedham Probate Court in connection with her will.

Of the whole estate, but $53,500 was in real estate.

The inventory was filed by the appraisers, Irvin McDowell Garfield, George H. Parker and Philip S. Parker. The executors are given as Philip S. Parker and Brooks Frothingham, son of the woman.

Mrs. Parker was found dead in her room at the Waldorf-Astoria Hotel by a maid. The woman was lying across the bed and $200,000 worth of jewels were neatly arranged on the dresser.

New York police were called in to the case in belief that the woman's death was through other than natural causes.

It was found subsequently, however, that she died from a cerebral hemorrhage, and the investigation was dropped.

GETS YEAR FOR BLOW ON JAW

George Burke, 27, of Chestnut st., Cambridge, thought John D. Ludkins, 45, of Howard st., Cambridge, was going to draw a knife, and Ludkins thought Burke had a revolver, according to their stories today in Cambridge Court.

Burke cams in a poor second with his story and drew a sentence of one year in the House of Correction for assault and battery.

According to Ludkins' testimony, Burke, on the night of May 5, ordered Ludkins to throw his hands up and when he failed to act quickly enough, Burke swung his fist and Ludkins woke up in the hospital.

Burke testified that he merely asked Ludkins for the time, but when Ludkins reached for a pocket he thought he was going to draw a knife and he swung on Ludkins' jaw. He appealed the sentence.

MOVE TO FORCE TARIFF VOTE

Washington, May 22 (INS)—A new move was made today by Representative Willis Hawley (R.) of Oregon, pilot of the new tariff bill, to pass the bill in the House under a Republican caucus agreement which would permit only committee amendments to be offered.

Such a plan, if adopted, would prevent fights over a number of schedules, including the sugar free-for-all, and would virtually exclude the Democrats from any participation in passage of the measure.

OLD CLASSIC IS BARRED HERE BY U. S. EDICT

Regarded as among the classics for 170 years, Voltaire's "Candide" was today adjudged improper by the U. S. Treasury Department.

Collector of the Port W. W. Lufkin has seized 13 copies of the book mailed from France to a Boston bookseller during the last month.

Assistant Collector E. Perry of the Treasury Department in Washington has barred further importation of the book into the United States. The reason given is that it violates the tariff act "because of the text."

The first Boston seizure was made on April 29, when a solitary copy of "Candide" was confiscated by federal officials. The following day the department notified W. B. Dumas, bookseller at 120 Tremont st., that 12 more copies shipped from France had been seized by the customs authorities.

With notification of the seizure, Mr. Dumas was warned that the Treasury Department's decision was final and that if protest was not entered within 60 days the books would be destroyed.

Prof. Andre Morize, professor of French literature at Harvard, and Prof. J. D. M. Ford of the modern language department at Harvard intend to take the matter up with officials in Washington to have the ruling rescinded and the books released.

MORE CAPITAL FOR 12 LIGHT COMPANIES

Application on behalf of 12 light and power companies for approval of proposed capital stock issues, amounting to close to $800,000, was made today to the department of public utilities by Edward C. Mason, counsel for the companies.

Questions by Henry C. Attwill, chairman of the department, who presided at the hearing, brought out that all of the companies are owned or controlled by the Massachusetts Utilities Associates, a gigantic power holding company, which controls more than a score of local light and power companies with combined assets of more than $40,000,000.

Chairman Attwill asked as to the dividends paid by each of the companies seeking approval of the issuance of new capital stock and as to the ownership and control of the companies. The Worcester Suburban Electric Company topped the list with a dividend rate of 16 per cent on the par value of its capital stock.

The dividends of the other companies were: Blackstone Electric Light Co., 8 per cent; Central Mass. Electric Co., 9 per cent; Norton Power & Electric Co., 8 per cent.

Plymouth Electric Light Co., 10 per cent; Plymouth Gas Light Co., none; Randolph & Holbrook Power & Electric Co., 9 per cent; Southeastern Massachusetts Power & Electric Co., 10 per cent; Southern Berkshire Power & Electric Co., 12 per cent; Union Light & Power Co., 9 per cent; Ware Electric Co., 8 per cent; Winchendon Electric Light & Power Co., 8 per cent.

HITS TREE AS COPS PURSUE

Dr. Philip I. Johnson, dentist, of 191 Davis ave., Brookline, called a hit-and-run driver, may die as a result of running away from a car he bumped, and then led police a chase of three miles, during which his car skidded into a tree on Englewood ave., Brookline.

Back Bay and Brookline policemen had pursued the dentist after his car had struck a parked machine owned by Donaldson Jones of 330 Chestnut Hill ave., Brookline, in front of 81 Audubon rd., Back Bay. He was taken to St. Elizabeth's Hospital.

POLICEMAN IS GANG VICTIM

Chicago, May 22 (INS)—Policeman Joseph Sullivan, a detective bureau "ace," was found shot to death today, a supposed victim of a kidnaping gang which murdered Detective Ray Martin last week.

Sullivan was assigned to investigate the killing of Martin, who was slain when he tried to trap extortionists who were seeking to collect $10,000 for liberating Philip Blumenthal, wealthy former bootlegger.

Shot through the head, Sullivan was found by a detective bureau squad slumped at the wheel of a green coupe.

CITY'S TRAFFIC HEAD TO AID PEDESTRIANS

Pedestrian safety will be the principal initial aim of Boston's new traffic commissioner, William A. Fisher, he announced today on beginning his duties.

The commissioner, who will receive an annual salary of $7500, was confirmed yesterday by the Civil Service Commission and was at his office today earlier than the majority of clerks and stenographers.

Outlining his first aims, he said he will begin a city-wide program of adequate crosswalk markings and will move for the immediate installation of "safety islands" for pedestrians.

"Having been associated with traffic matters since December, 1926," he said, "I am deeply appreciative of the opportunity presented to assist in putting into actual operation many of the recommendations resulting from the mayor's traffic survey and from studies made since the report was printed.

"Continued cooperation on the part of the police and general public is earnestly desired. Their patience and assistance in the work thus far have been of material benefit."

7 WIVES LAND HIM IN JAIL FOR A YEAR

Charles W. Chick, former "gob" in Uncle Sam's navy, who went from Maine to California and from Florida to Paris, France, in search of a wife and accumulated seven in his wanderings, must forego marriage for a year now while he's in jail.

Chick was arrested in Brightwood terrace, Lynn, on April 28, on a warrant charging polygamy. The warrant was issued on the complaint of wife No. 7 that he had failed to support her.

In Salem Superior Criminal court today he pleaded guilty and was sentenced by Judge Sisk to a year in the House of Correction.

Two of his seven wives testified against him. Mrs. Ethel Leyson Chick of Howard st., Lynn, said she married him in Youngstown, O., a year ago but that he had since given her no support.

Mrs. Hilda Wizard of Portsmouth, N. H., testified her wedded romance fled when Chick treated her cruelly. She was his sixth wife and was forced to leave him, she said.

The other wives named in court were Rose Dorothy Chick and Laura Anderson Chick, both of Biddeford, Me.; Yvonne Chick of Paris, France; Lena Chick of Pensacola, Fla., and Loretta Chick of Pasadena, Cal.

NAB CAMBRIDGE BOTTLE TOSSER

New York, May 22 (INS)—A barrage of milk bottles thrown into the lobby of the Piccadilly Hotel by a 24-year-old miss who gave her name as Margaret Donnelly of Cambridge, Mass., school teacher, brought her into West Side court today.

There she pleaded guilty to disorderly conduct after explaining, "I don't know why I did it."

Magistrate Godsky gave her a lecture and a suspended sentence. Miss Donnelly was arrested when she threw the milk bottles into the lobby after Arthur Bolton, house detective, had ordered her out shortly after 3 a. m.

She told Magistrate Godsky she had recently suffered a nervous breakdown which forced her to give up teaching.

STOCK LISTING BILL IS URGED

An amendment to the income tax law to require foreign corporations to file a list of their Massachusetts stockholders annually, so that it may be determined whether they have complied with the State tax laws, was urged at a hearing before the House Rules Committee today by Tax Commissioner Henry F. Long.

It was explained that under the law exercising of the option on rights demands a return to the State income tax division. The stockholder list would be used in checking up on the selling of rights.

REPORT ON 'L' CONTROL BILL DUE IN HOUSE

A report from the House Ways and Means Committee, probably containing a new draft of the Elevated public control extension bill, is expected to be filed late today in the House.

Speaker Saltonstall announced the House would be kept in recess until a late hour to receive any report the committee might make. He made this statement after a conference with Representative Victor Jewett of Lowell, Representative Thomas R. Bateman of Winchester and Representative Henry L. Shattuck of Boston, chairman of the committee.

The possibility of a redraft led to reports the Governor had suggested the move with preference to such a report over any other "L" legislation. The Governor, however, denied having made such suggestion. Discussing the Elevated problem, the Governor continued:

"With regard to my position on the Elevated bills, I shall never take any action that will not leave my hands free to handle the situation as I see best when the Elevated matter reaches me.

"I hope the Legislature will put on my desk what it considers a fair and proper solution of the problem regardless of stockholders or anybody else.

"My position on the Elevated has not changed."

Cardinal Thanks the American for Pilgrim Work

Cardinal O'Connell, in a letter today from his secretary, expresses his thanks to the Boston Evening American for the handling of reports of the pilgrimage which he led to Rome.

The letter follows:

Rear Sir—His Eminence, the Cardinal, directs me to convey to you his hearty thanks for the splendid manner in which the reports of the recent pilgrimage to Rome were handled by the Boston Evening American.

His Eminence says that the articles which appeared were most interesting and complete.

Very sincerly yours,

IL DUCE BANS BEAUTY TESTS

Rome, May 22—Mussolini has turned his thumbs down on the holding of "beauty contests" anywhere in Italy.

He cites as his reason that they are "grave inconveniences to the moral order." The order was given out by the minister of the interior and directed to all provincial prefects.

TUNNEY BARED THEM BEFORE HIS WEDDING

New York, May 22—Mrs. Katherine King Fogarty's claims against Gene Tunney, scheduled to materialize today in the filing of papers in a $500,000 breach of promise suit, were known to the socially prominent Polly Lauder, now Mrs. Tunney, and were discussed at a Lauder family conference before the Greenwich heiress married the retired heavyweight champion.

This was disclosed by Flood E. Barbour, secretary to Mrs. George H. Lauder, mother of Tunney's bride. The family, he said, decided the claims were baseless.

At the same time Tunney's attorney, George W. Whiteside, made public an affidavit over the signature of Mrs. Fogarty in which Mrs. Fogarty said that Tunney "is under no obligation to me and never was." The affidavit was dated July 24, 1928, two days before Tunney's last fight for the heavyweight championship.

Friends of Tunney rallied to his defence today.

Extolling "the high moral character and spotless reputation of the ex-marine," they termed the impending suit "a very poor joke," especially in view of the fact that Tunney's heiress-bride, the former Polly Lauder, is convalescing from a serious operation in Brioni, Italy.

Mrs. Katherine King Fogarty, attractive 30-year-old divorcee, who claims that Tunney promised four years ago to marry her, was "not at home" today at her apartment in the San Carlos Hotel here.

Tunney Calls Love Suit 'Joke'; Has 'Worries Enough'

Brioni, Italy, May 22 (AP)—Gene Tunney thinks the suit of Mrs. Katherine King Fogarty, divorced wife of a Ft. Worth plumber, for $500,000 for alleged breach of promise to marry "must be another joke."

The one-time champion heavyweight pugilist, when informed that steps toward litigation had been taken in Connecticut, said: "I know absolutely nothing of the report."

He added: "It must be another joke. When I am wed let my attorneys worry. I have all the worries I can handle right now here."

The present worries, although unexplained, were presumed to refer to the recuperation of his wife, the former Polly Lauder, heiress, after an operation for appendicitis.

Mrs. Fogarty Fainted at the News of Gene's 'Engagement'

Los Angeles, May 22—Kate Fogarty, Texas beauty who asks $500,000 from Gene Tunney, figured in an incident in mid-Pacific a year ago—with the former champion playing a leading role by wireless proxy.

Fresh from the romantic spell of a pale Hawaiian moon, the happy Mrs. Fogarty fainted when she read a brief radio bulletin of a reported engagement of Tunney to a Beverly Hills heiress, published in the ship's paper as the liner was nearing Los Angeles.

At least this is the much-repeated story that thrilled the feminine hearts of Mrs. Fogarty's friends immediately after the young woman left the steamer and registered at the Biltmore Hotel here in March, 1928.

And Kate's secret—known only to a few—formed the basis of a report circulated in the friendly set that Mrs. Fogarty had been secretly married to the ring champion—although "Kay," as she is known in her circle, never personally was known to claim that distinction.

Independent investigation carried out in Texas, New York and Mexico, and through the girl's relatives, failed to disclose any verification of the report. But wagging tongues, by pure coincidence, named one-half million dollars as the sum involved in an asserted property settlement figuring in the case.

Efforts to verify tales of packets of love letters daintily tied with ribbons, and supposedly the work of the literarily-inclined conqueror of Jack Dempsey, were unsuccessful.

Still Deadlocked Over Farm Bill

Washington, May 22 (INS)—The third conference between House and Senate conferees on the farm bill ended today with the debenture row still deadlocked.

The House conferees refused even to discuss other sections of the bill while the debenture remained in the measure. There were hints that the House delegation would adopt a different attitude tomorrow.

Snow Cross a Monument

Washington, May 22 (AP)—A cross of snow in Colorado is now a national monument. A gigantic cross, visible for miles, formed by two snow-filled crevices on the side of a mountain is included in an area of 1292 acres set apart by presidential proclamation.

END OF DRY TIDE IS NEAR, SAYS CURRAN

"The tide of prohibition is ebbing, and it will have vanished into the limbo of forgotten things in another five years," Henry H. Curran, president of the Association Against the Prohibition Amendment said today.

He said that the Anti-Saloon League, "with bootleggers, racketeers and murderers its warmest allies," has not won a victory in five years, and the majority of American people know prohibition is a failure.

DUPONT CHAIRMAN

Curran came to Boston to confer with Constitutional Liberties League, the association organized to oppose prohibition, and was accompanied by Pierre duPont, chairman of the board of directors of E. I. duPont de Nemours & Co.

"The United States will be rid of prohibition in five years, for the tide is setting against the fanaticism which is now directing the enforcement and the common sense of the American people will lead them to repeal the 18th amendment or ignore it," Curran said in part.

TURNING POINT REACHED

"There are many indications that the turning point has now been reached in the prohibition game, if that term can be applied to so gruesome a situation. One of the most obvious is the passage of the Jones act. The act is a confession of weakness, a counsel of despair.

"Underneath the developments in Massachusetts, Wisconsin, New York, Illinois, Maryland, Montana and Nevada there is the rising tide of public resentment. When the opinion and temper of the American people reach a certain point they cannot be resisted. National prohibition has been in operation for nearly 10 years, and the country is beginning to cast up the balance sheet."

Name Street to Honor Roman Pact

Rome, May 23 (AP)—A Roman thoroughfare will be named "The Street of Conciliation" to celebrate the signature of the Lateran accords. The municipality announced today that the street chosen would probably be a stretch of road near the Castel St. Angelo in the old "Borgo" quarter, close to the Vatican.

4 Drown in Plane Crash; Pilot Saved

Algiers, Algeria, May 22 (AP)—Four persons were drowned today when a commercial hydroplane taking off for Marseilles crashed and sank. The pilot, named Ringel, a good swimmer, reached shore and was saved by boatmen from the breakwater.

Four non-swimmers, however, were drowned.

SCORE VICTORY IN BASIN BILL

Objectors in the Back Bay to the sunken roadway feature in the $2,305,000 improvement bill for the Charles River Basin, have won a substantial victory in the report on the measure submitted by the ways and means committee to the House.

Under an amendment to the bill, the 225 foot fill on the Beacon st. side must be used exclusively for recreational purposes. Without this amendment, it was contended, it was planned to put the road through at a latter date, probably five years from now.

The committee continues its study of the Boston El control bill and no agreement is looked for for several days.

Death Threat Fails to Save Bigamist

Despite his statement that he married a second wife only when his life was threatened, Pasquale Fabrazio, 40, of Maverick st., East Boston, in East Boston Court was sentenced to one year for bigamy. He appealed. According to the evidence, on Sept. 29, 1928, Fabrazio married Concetta Mercandante of Cottage st., although he had a wife and child in Italy.

In his own defense Fabrazio said he went with the woman to the office of a justice of the peace, where he was placed before a cross which meant "death" if he the candidacies for the office of high outside sentinel and for trustee.

Cardinal O'Connell was to address the more than 2000 delegates late this afternoon.

During the noon recess groups of delegates visited points of interest in the city. Special guests of the convention include James P. Kennedy of Fenway Court, M. C. O. F., of Boston, who is a charter member of the organization. He has attended every convention since 1879.

HONOR GUESTS

Another honore dguest is Mrs. Margaret McCann of St. Louis Court, Brockton, who was the first woman chief ranger in the order. Other guests included:

Miss Helena Mulcahy, Miss Mary M. Mulligan, Miss Catherine C. Hannon, Thomas F. Brison and Thomas F. Fitzgerald, all of Middlesex Court; David F. Roach of George Washington Court, Mrs. Winifred V. Welch of St. Valerian Court, John A. Healy of Westford Court, Mrs. Charlotte M. Shea of Blessed Sacrament Court, Ralph T. Connor of Campello Court, John Burdette of St. Dominic Court, Mrs. Helen M. McKeon of Father Sherry Court and Joseph Carletto of Our Lady of Pompeii Court.

ATTEND RECEPTION

Another interesting feature on today's program was the reception given the delegates by the Past Chief Rangers' Association of Greater Boston. Mrs. Margaret McDonald, president of the association, welcomed the guests.

All of the delegates attended the solemn high mass for deceased members in Holy Cross Cathedral early today.

High Court Chaplain Rev. Harry M. O'Connor was celebrant, with Rev. John R. Wall as deacon and Rev. William B. Foley as sub-deacon. At the close of the service the delegates returned to the Hotel Statler to continue business sessions.

High Secretary-Treasurer Joseph J. Forrester submitted his annual report, showing the order to have a credit balance of $3,483,873.51. New members during the year totaled 1886, of which 1005 were women. The total membership as of December 31, 1928, was 57,807.

Trustees John J. Lynch and Edmund L. Dolan submitted their report, and other committees reporting were those on amendments, credentials, appeals, state of the order, secret work, petitions and elections.

High Medical Examiner Dr. Francis J. Hanley, in his report, disclosed that the death rate among members was increasing. The percentage per 1000 in 1927 was 12.98, while in 1928 it jumped to 13.14. Deaths in 1927 were 712, and in 1928, 762.

Late today the annual election of officers will be held. The convention continues through tomorrow.

Hailing their order as a potent force in the campaign for law observance, former Mayor James M. Curley told 2000 members of the order at their golden jubilee dinner that through them this Commonwealth excels in respect for law.

"To your organization more than any other may be traced that respect for law which makes Massachusetts stand out among the states of the union," he said.

"Tonight, you celebrate the golden jubilee of your foundation as a charitable and benevolent order. The 50 years have seen much progress. Fifty years ago we were weak. We had that inferiority complex. We were taught that the other fellow was better than us.

"Things have changed now. Things have changed in this Commonwealth. Fifty years have seen us grow until now we have dozens of schools and colleges with thousands of young men and women being trained in the principles of high idealism of their faith.

"Today, the leading basic industries of America are conducted under the leadership of Catholics," he said. "Steel, copper, railroad and motor industries are directed by Catholics. The inferiority complex is going."

ON POWER TRUST

Referring briefly to the activities of the power trust, Curley said: "Many imagine that the sale of two Boston newspapers to the power trust is an evil thing. At any rate, the control of great agencies of public information may be a great power for good or a great power for evil."

The ballroom of the Statler and two adjoining halls were crowded to the doors when High Chief Ranger Peter A. Welch, presiding as toastmaster, welcomed the delegates and members.

He introduced Governor Allen, who brought the greeting of the State. The governor complimented the Foresters on their charitable undertakings. He mentioned particularly the contributions they made to the sufferers in the Chelsea and Salem fires.

"The Commonwealth is deeply indebted to you. It has nothing but the highest praise for your splendid fraternal organization," he said.

Rev. Harry M. O'Connor, high court chaplain, congratulated the delegates on the splendid work they have been doing and urged its long continuance. He read a letter from Cardinal O'Connell in which the churchman praised the remarkable growth of the order and gave his blessing and approval to its work.

NICHOLS APPLAUDED

Mayor Nichols, in bringing the greetings of the city, received thunderous applause when he termed the gathering "the most inspiring that ever greeted my eye in three years as chief magistrate of this city."

Dr. Helen I. C. McGillicuddy, past high chief ranger, traced the influence of women in the organization since their admission 25 years ago. She showed how the women have always been in the forefront at all times of emergency and stress.

Interspersed through the speaking program were several vocal selections by Elizabeth Greenwood, Helena C. Galvin, Harold O'Neil and William J. Sullivan.

Prominent among the guests at the dinner were James P. Kennedy of Fenwick Court, a Forester for 50 years, and Mrs. Margaret McCann of St. Rose Court, Brockton, the first chief ranger in the order.

The three day jubilee celebration and convention will continue through today and tomorrow.

Boy, 6, Injured When Hit by Auto

John Langan, six, of Gray st, Charlestown, was injured when he was knocked down by an automobile operated, the police say, by Peter F. Welch of Dorchester on Chelsea st., Charlestown. The boy was picked up by Welch and taken to the Haymarket Sq. Relief Hospital. Dr. Robbins found him suffering from contusions.

Women Far in Lead at British Polls

London, May 22 (AP)—Women voters in Great Britain today outnumbered the sterner sex by more than a million and a quarter. Complete final returns of voters who may participate in the general elections May 30 put the number of women eligible at 13,227,690 and the number of men at 11,885,158.

$100,000,000 POWER DEAL BY COMBINE

olated Gas & Electric System has acquired the huge up-state New York public utility and railroad holdings of Ellis H. Phillips, public utility engineer, for more than $100,000,000, Wall Street heard today.

Confirmation of the report was unavailable at the offices of both the Associated System and E. H. Phillips & Co.

The price paid by the Associated System for the Phillips up-state interests was calculated by Wall Street on the basis of the stock and cash offers recently announced by the Associated System. The cash offer for Rochester Power Corp. amounts to $80,000,000.

PART IN STOCKS

Part of the $80,000,000 may be paid for in stocks offered as an alternate plan to stockholders. The traction properties were acquired by the Phillips group for more than $4,650,750, not including $2,000,000 indebtedness assumed on one property, or a total of $5,650,750.

This figure does not include the United Gas & Electric Corporation group, including Lockport Light, Heat & Power, International Power & Transportation, Central New York Utilities and their subsidiaries.

The Rochester Central power group includes the New York Central Electric Corporation, the Empire Gas & Electric Company, the Empire Water, Light & Railroad Company, the Rochester Gas & Electric Corporation and the Mohawk Valley Company.

COMBINES INVESTMENT TRUST

The Mohawk Valley and its subsidiaries, Chester Gas & Electric, were acquired by the Phillips interests from the New York Central Railroad a year ago at a cost of $38,250,000.

The outcome of the deal, according to reports, is that the Empire Power Corporation, Mr. Phillips' holding company for most of its private utilities, has become an investment trust, its principal holdings being short-term notes, cash and some stockholdings which include indirectly about 270,000 shares of Long Island Lighting.

Boys Confess $100,000 Fires

Methuen, May 22—Six boys, from nine to thirteen years, were arrested today by Patrolman Cyril Fenton, who had been investigating a series of automobile incendies. Two of the boys, according to police, admitted setting icehouse fires in April, 1928, in which the loss was more than $100,000.

Two German Officers Will Train With U. S. Army Groups

Washington, May 22 (AP)—Secretary Good today authorized the attachment of Capt. Helm Speidel of the German army to a bombardment group at Langley Field, Virginia, for a period of one month.

Capt. Speidel recently arrived in the United States with Capt. Warlimont, also of the German army, for instruction in army service schools. They are the first German officers to be attached to the American army since the World War.

Texarkana Bank Robbed of $8000

Texarkana, Ark., May 22 (AP)—Four unmasked men robbed the Miller County Bank & Trust Company of Texarkana of about $8000 in currency after forcing five bank officials and two customers into the vault shortly before noon today. The men escaped in a green automobile.

Soldiers' Relief Commissioner Eleanor G. Woodman was the only city official to obtain pay raise from the Malden board of aldermen. Her salary is raised $150 to $1750.

SAY LYNN GIRL FAKED 'SUICIDE'

Because she wanted to frighten her mother, according to police, Betty Brown, 16, of Liberty st., Lynn, today pretended to drink from a bottle of disinfectant and was taken to Lynn Hospital.

On arrival physicians found the girl had not swallowed any of the liquid and she was sent home with a reprimand.

Earlier in the day Patrolman Linus Shanahan came on the girl weeping as she sat in a parked automobile between two men. Miss Brown told him she was weeping because of trouble at home. The officer took her home, and talked with her parents.

Then came the call for an ambulance.

DIVA QUITS HER TENANT HUBBY

Rome, May 22 (AP)—Madame Luisa Tetrazzini, famous operatic singer, has obtained a decree of separation from her young husband, Julio Vernati, on the grounds of incompatability. They were married in 1926, Vernati being a tenant in an apartment house owned by the singer.

The separation was by mutual consent. News of the breakdown of the romance between the diva and her tenant caused great surprise among her friends here since she had been photographed with him in London recently and they seemed most affectionate.

Madame Tetrazzini refused to discuss the separation today.

$1,000,000 Mouse Gives Lynn Police "Riot Call" Action

Shrieks resounding through Lynn police headquarters today sent officers tumbling into the office of Miss Sally Donovan, secretary to Chief of Police Thomas M. Burrkes.

The 54-year-old chief was first on the scene, however, and found Miss Donovan standing on her desk, her skirts clutched tightly, while a mouse capered about on the floor.

Seizing a yard-stick, the chief charged on the mouse and, to the cheers of his subordinates, pursued it around the office, eventually dispatching the rodent.

HOOVER'S LAW PLEA ON AIR

New York, May 22 (AP)—With all its widespread machinery for reaching the public ear, the radio industry today responded to President Hoover's recent appeal to the American people for co-operation in enforcing the nation's laws.

On Memorial Day, at 7 p. m. eastern daylight saving time, there will be broadcast a five-minute address on law enforcement, to be selected by President Hoover out of five speeches now being prepared by five noted jurists.

The five speeches will be submitted to President Hoover when he meets his law enforcement committee next Tuesday.

The two big national broadcasting systems have tentatively agreed to put the speech on their networks.

LIGHT BILL IS AGAIN HELD UP BY SENATORS

The Senate ways and means committee today again failed to act on the municipal lighting bill at its executive session, despite reports that an informal vote showed three of the five members in favor of reporting on the people's side and against the power trust.

Prior to the meeting, the lobbyist of the private fighting group that is working to bring about the bill's defeat, was active in the State House corridors.

Senator Clarence P. Kidder of Cambridge, chairman of the committee, in reply to inquiries, said he could not tell when the next executive session would be held. He admitted that the committee had bot two other bills before it, outside of the lighting bill.

Today's developments were regarded as final proof that the Senate leaders are doing everything they can to hold up the bill until the House Ways and Means Committee takes action on a resolve creating a special commission of seven to investigate the power trust activities in Massachusetts.

They are relying on the hope that the resolve will come out of the lower branch committee. Then teh next move will be to fill the light bill by referrin git to the committee for investigation.

50 PLANES ON AIR TOUR TO VISIT HUB

Boston will receive some 50 planes in October, when the fifth annual national air tour stops here during the 4400-mile cruise of 28 cities in 20 states and two Canadian provinces, it was learned today from the Aeronautical Chamber of Commerce.

The air tour, which is sponsored by Edsel B. Ford, will start from the Ford airport in Dearborn, Mich., on October 8, and will end at the same airport on October 21. This will be the second time the air tour fliers have visited Boston, the last time being in 1927.

Capt. Ray Collins of Detroit is manager of the 1929 tour, and Capt. Frank M. Hawks, holder of the west to east nonstop transcontinental air record, will be referee.

The official sanction of the Aeronautical Chamber of Commerce was granted today to the tour, and plans are being rushed to have everything in readiness for the start.

Capt. Collins announced that the entries of this year's tour will be limited to bonafide aircraft manufacturers, to the exclusion of companies seeking to advertise their products with "flying billboards."

The itinerary of the tour at present includes the following cities: Windsor, Toronto, Ottawa, Montreal, Portland, Me.; Boston, New York city, Philadelphia, Baltimore, Richmond, Charlotte, N. C.; Greenville, S. C., Savannah, Jacksonville, Macon, Ga.; Atlanta, Ga.; Nashville, Louisville, St. Louis, Kansas City, Des Moines, St. Paul, Wausau, Wis.; Milwaukee, Moline, Ill.; Chicago, Kalamazoo, Mich., and Detroit.

ENGLISH HIGH CLASS DAY

Class Day exercises of the English High School will take place Thursday morning, starting at 9:05 o'clock in the Assembly Hall, it was announced today.

The officers of the class are: President, Howard Rains; vice-president, Ewart G. Guinier; secretary-treasurer, George M. Franklin, and executive committee, James Doherty, Gardener W. Philbrick.

The program, featured by selections by the English High School orchestra, will begin by an entrance march played by the orchestra directed by LeRoy M. Sand, member of the faculty. Then an address by President Rains.

The next number will be the class song, words and music by Albert Rossi, followed by a vocal selection by Thomas S. Howell, class of 1932, accompanied by Arthur F. Leary of the faculty. President Rains will present the class gift, which will be accepted by Head Master Walter F. Downey.

The Kathleens, Mollies and Kitties took full advantage of their privileges and hurried to the polls before going to work.

The elections were for the Northern Ireland Parliament.

WORKMAN HURT IN CAVEIN

Buried in a cave-in at the site of the new Roberts School, Windsor st., and Broadway, Cambridge, Dennis Lucy, 45, of Fayette st., Cambridge, was rescued today by fellow workers.

He was taken to the city hospital where it was found he had severe injuries of the body and legs.

Fire in Storeroom of the Leviathan

New York, May 22 (AP)—A slight fire in a storeroom of the United States liner Leviathan early today was extinguished with no damage to the ship. Some equipment was destroyed.

The liner, which arrived Monday and is to sail Saturday, was at its dock off Forty-sixth st. A fireboat and a company of land apparatus extinguished the blaze.

Elevator Operator Dies of Hemorrhage

After collapsing from a cerebral hemorrhage at the South Station today, Edwin Glidden, 70, of Albany st., died two hours later at Haymarket Relief Hospital. He was employed at the station as an elevator operator, but was not on duty at the time of his collapse.

FINE WEATHER FOR 2 DAYS

Sunshine and warmth are practically guaranteed to prevail for the next 48 hours, according to the official forecast of the local weather bureau.

All regions east of the Rockies report a return of spring-like conditions with the exception of the Ohio valley, where light frosts have caused some damage to orchards and early garden growth.

Smith to Stay on Shipping Board

EDISON SPURNS 'LAZY WORKERS AND YES MEN'

(Copyright, 1929, by International News Service)

West Orange, N. J., May 22—Thomas A. Edison, the world's greatest inventor, has no patience with lazy people.

He won't stand for alibis from his executives.

He refuses pointblank to listen to "half-baked" ideas.

And he abhors "yes men."

His son, Charles Edison, 35-year-old president of the Thomas A. Edison Industries, employing 5000 men in the manufacture and sales of radios, phonographs, storage batteries and other commodities, made these revelations in an exclusive interview today.

DISLIKES "LAZY MEN"

Young Edison is "running the business," while his illustrious father continues his rubber experiments in his laboratory at Ft. Myers, Fla. No one knows "Dad" better than his son.

"Oh, yes," Charles Edison smiled, "I hear from father right along. He's chairman of the board, and don't think for a moment that he doesn't know what's going on."

Continuing, he said:

"I've noticed one thing about him; he has no patience with lazy people, and he doesn't like slow fellows. He likes a show of alertness; an up-and-at-'em spirit.

"He dislikes the 'yes men' type of executive and will not have them once he finds them out. And he does not want any of his men to bring half-baked propositions to him.

TURNS DOWN FIRST PLANS

"I have learned by experience that almost always when you first bring him a proposition he will turn it down flatly. When it's a good plan, it's accepted. 'Now you've got something?' is invariably his comment."

Edison is a splendid judge of men, in his son's opinion. He said his father often handles the new men rather roughly, rebuking inefficient work in no uncertain terms. Once he has confidence in one of his men, he is "the easiest man in the world to deal with.

CALL U. S. SHIP IN CHINA'S WAR

Hongkong, May 22—The United States gunboat Tulsa was sent from Hongkong to Swatow, Kwangtung, today in answer to requests of the United States consul there for protection for American interests.

Kwangsi units, which the consul said were retreating toward Swatow, clashed with Fukienese troops who were aiding Kwangtung (Canton), resulting in disturbances in Swatow.

The U. S. S. Mindanao has replaced the Tulsa at Canton.

Mrs. Taft Heads R. I. Republican Women

Providence, May 22—Mrs. Royal C. Taft has been elected president of the Rhode Island League of Women voters, at the annual meeting of that organization.

Other officers elected were: Mrs. Henry G. Hanchett, first vice president; Rosamond W. Austin, Mrs. P. J. Clarke, Mrs. George H. Crooker, Mrs. Robert E. Newton, Edith Nichols, directors for two years; Mrs. Richard B. Earle, director for one year; Mrs. W. A. H. Comstock, Providence, Mrs. Thomas Crowe, Bristol, Mrs. Gideon Gardner of Saunderstown, county chairmen for Providence, Bristol, Kent, Newport and Washington counties, respectively.

SOCIETY'S DAUGHTERS AWAIT LITTLE THEATER'S OPENING

Gloucester School to Start Its 10th Season on June 29

TIMES DO CHANGE—AND SOCIETY'S customs with them! 'Twas not so long ago that a stage career for a member of the elite was frowned upon by the powers that be in high society. That was before certain independent spirits essayed other fields and won the approbation of influential dowagers who are supposed to regulate the manners of the elect. It is not quite smart for society's talented daughters to go in for repertory theater study. Miss Susan Blake, one of the recent debutantes who won laurels in Ethel Barrymore's company, little dreamed what ardent ambitions her success was kindling among Winsor school girls, who were further encouraged by the recent stage debut of Miss Edith Parker. Miss Judith Chase, now abroad, and Miss Peggy Leland are to resume their theatrical courses next season.

TODAY THE BRIGHT-EYED Juniors who followed every move in the Barrymore play last winter are directing their glances toward the Gloucester School of the Little Theater, which opens its tenth season on Saturday, June 29, with a liberal sprinkling of social register names enrolled. There's added thrill in the secret rumor that a tour is to take place the last week of the season, after the usual repertory, and one of the best bills being taken to the nearby towns. In the junior department will be Faith Garrison, Phoebe Russell, Margot Stanwood, Mary Forbes and Allerton Cushman. Others intent upon delving into interpretations of Ibsen, Pirandello, Dunsany and Galsworthy a la repertory include Miriam Dodge, Noeline Bullock and Evelyn Thompson.

Miss Phyllis Ellsworth — Miss Sally Sprague

Miss Phyllis Ellsworth and Miss Sally Sprague are to be joint hostesses at a large dinner party at the Sprague home, 199 Commonwealth ave., Friday evening, preceding the dance for Miss Barbara Welch at Milton.

J. PLUVIUS WAS PRACTICALly the only one uninvited at the series of garden parties on Chestnut Hill today. He spoiled the party yesterday when the Farm and Garden Association had assembled some very choice garden accessories at the home of Mrs. Edwin S. Webster. Mrs. James D. Colt is in charge, assisted by Mrs. Horace Frazer, Mrs. Charles E. Cotting, Mrs. Henry W. Harris, Mrs. George U. Crocker, Mrs. Walter G. Reed, Mrs. Jack Ramsay and Mrs. Clement R. Houghton. Others assisting with the opening of the garden are Mrs. Albert C. Burrage, Mrs. Robert C. Morse, Mrs. Quincy A. Shaw, Mrs. George S. Wood, Mrs. Chandler Hovey, Mrs. H. B. Stowell, Miss Helen Guild, Mrs. Sewall Cabot, Mrs. H. V. Greenough and several more.

THERE'S A FESTIVE AIR about the fine estate of Mrs. Richard M. Saltonstall on Chestnut Hill today, with entertainment provided for children as well as grown-ups. There are ponies for the little ones to ride, pools to sail their boats upon, and ice cream galore. For this is a Garden Fete including not only the terraced and boxed gardens of Mrs. Saltonstall, but those of Mrs. George S. West on Saltonstal ave., Mrs. George S. Mumford and Mrs. Sewell H. Fassenden, both on Essex rd., and of Mrs. Leverett Saltonstall and Mrs. Endicott Saltonstall, whose estates adjoin that of Mrs. Richard M. Saltonstall. Mrs. George H. Lyman, Jr., is presiding at the tea table, Mrs. John Marquand in charge of the "grabs," and Mrs. Charles Leighton in charge of the ice cream booth. The Habit Clinic for Child Guidance will benefit.

STILL ANOTHER ATTRACTION makes Chestnut Hill the Mecca for charitably disposed pilgrims today, for the Christopher Shop luncheon and spring sale is also on the cards for the home of Mrs. James A. Nelson, 14 Old Orchard rd. Mrs. Horace Morison and a large committee are offering an attractive collection of unusual things at this handsome estate at the corner of Hammond and Beacon sts.

THE NORTH SHORE GARDEN CLUB takes its cue from the temperamental weatherman and sets the date for opening six show places in the vicinity of Pride's Crossing as May 31 and June 1 beginning at 9 a. m. A sale of choice annuals and perennials at Mrs. William H. Moore's exercising ring at Pride's Crossing offers opportunity for viewing this fine estate, playground of the Myopia Hunt set on occasion.

Reunion of Lodge and Sears Families at Beverly June 26

JUNE 26 IS TO BE A DAY OF reunion in Beverly for the members of the Lodge and Sears families, for on that date Mr. and Mrs. Henry Cabot Lodge are due to arrive at the summer home of Mrs. Lodge's parents, Dr. and Mrs. Henry F. Sears of Beacon st. These travelers are now in Peking on their globe circling trip. The travel chronicle also tells of the imminent departure of Miss Alice Gilmor, who is to join the Misses Katharine, Rosamond and Elizabeth Thomas of Boston and Paris, with whom she makes her home. Other arrivals at the Thomas girls' Paris abode will include their uncle and aunt, Mr. and Mrs. Robert H. Stevenson (Alice L. Thomas), who are already en route abroad.

OLD GOLF SCORES ARE TO be svened tomorrow at the field day matches a t the Dedham Polo and Country Club between the Bankers and Brokers versus the Westwood teams. At 4 o'clock the polo ponies are to have their fun when these teams line up for trophies which will be awarded at the dinner at the club following the polo matches on the estate of W. Cameron Forbes. Carlyle Choate, Gov. Forbes, Dudley Clark and B. Nason Hamlin are playing against John Hopewell, Dudley Milliken, Dr. R. P. Strong and Warwick Greene. Mrs. Forbes and her friends will pour tea after the polo matches.

Doctor Stresses Importance of Juvenile Clinic Work

BRINGING the physician's point of view into problems of conduct and mal-adjustment!

This is the basis of a new social philosophy, the philosophy and practical application of the psychiatrist, which, centered upon the child guidance movement, gives promise to some day substantially remove those horrible end products of life, according to Dr. James S. Plant.

—Bachrach Photo

Mrs. Robert F. Herrick

Meaning those social liabilities under whose enormous burden society staggers—the insane, the feeble-minded, the delinquents, the paupers, the unhappy and inefficient.

"We cannot do away with criminals by suppressing crime and passing Saumes laws. We will never fight human difficulties by trying to suppress them."

Dr. Plant, who is director of the Essex County Juvenile Clinic of Newark, N. J., was the guest speaker at a meeting of the Judge Baker Foundation in the Chamber of Commerce building auditorium, attended by an enthusiastic group.

He was introduced by Mrs. Robert F. Herrick, chairman of the publicity committee for the Foundation. The meeting was arranged to acquaint the community with what the Foundation is doing, with the gradual progress of the child guidance movement and its unlimited possibilities.

Judge Cabot of the juvenile court of Boston, president of the Foundation, also stressed the value of the movement.

"A child misbehaves," Dr. Plant said. "The important fact is not how he misbehaved but just how symptomatic is his behavior. Of what is it the symptom? Of what deeper wrong is it the warning.

"This new social philosophy is not only for the delinquent, not only for queer and strange people. It is for every family in the country, for every child. It is for everybody because everybody is searching for a place in the sun.

"Then the emphasis of a clinic study is upon understanding the personality and its problems through the delinquency or conduct disorder," he asserted.

"A wide range of psychological tests are used to determine the child's ability to meet the academic requirements of life. The psychiatric examination means a searching study into the trend of his life, its ambitions and thwartings, how he has met discouragements, how he meets social competition; does he grade life's issues.

"Out of this comes a picture of the total child, his needs and his difficulty in solving those needs.

"We will never fight human difficulties by trying to suppress them. The clinic is of basic value because it represents an assay of the only thing that is worth while in a community—its children."

Working with Mrs. Herrick on this committee are Mrs. T. Gafton Abbott, Mrs. Harvey Bundy, Malcom Donald, Mrs. Edward H. Donnelly, Christian Herter, Mrs. James Jackson and Mrs. Milton J. Rosenau.

WOMEN'S REPUBLICAN CLUB

As a result of its annual meeting and election of officers for 1929-1930, Mrs. Franklin W. Hobbs of Boston became president of the Massachusetts Women's Republican Club for the third successive term. Other officers elected were Mrs. William M. Butler, Boston; Mrs. William Coolidge, Magnolia; Mrs. Frank G. Allen, Norwood; Mrs. Louis A. Frothingham, North Easton; Mrs. William G. Dwight, Holyoke; Mrs. Herbert L. Tinkham, Brockton, vice-presidents.

Mrs. George W. Perkins, Boston, secretary; Mrs. William S. Mitchell, Boston, treasurer. County chairmen elected include: Mrs. Raymond A. Hopkins for Barnstable; Mrs. Clinton Q. Richmond for Berkshire; Miss Rachel Morse for Bristol; Miss Enid Yandell for Dukes; Mrs. Charles H. Masury for Essex; Mrs. George W. Hatch for Franklin; Mrs. Joshua L. Brooks for Hampden; Mrs. Frederick E. Judd for Hampshire; Mrs. H. Addington Bruce for Middlesex; Mrs. Joseph H. Soliday for Norfolk; Mrs. Marion L. Higgins for Suffolk; Mrs. Alice P. Hodge for Plymouth; Mrs. Chester W. Lassell for Worcester.

Mrs. William Lowell Putnam, Boston and Mrs. Harmon W. Aborn of Brighton were elected to the nominating committee.

SOUTH END WOMEN'S CLUB

As a tribute to her two years of service and in recognition of her faithfulness to the South End Women's Club, Mrs. William D. King of Brookline, retiring president, was presented with a beautiful brooch of platinum and gold set with turquoise stones by the club members at the annual meeting in the club rooms, 20 Union Park.

She also received flowers. Elected to succeed her was Mrs. George T. Dowling.

SAVINGS BANK LIFE INSURANCE

$10 a month provides

$3000 Life Insurance

$1200 Cash

Savings Bank Life Insurance offers you this ideal financial plan—provides a substantial cash fund for you in 10 years if you live and $3000 life insurance for your family in the meantime.

This is the 10-Year Savings Insurance Plan No. 3 which calls for a monthly deposit of $10 over a period of 10 years. At the end of the 10 years there is a cash fund for you substantially in excess of your total deposits.

Cash for YOU Protection for THEM

For age 37 or younger at entry, this cash fund amounts to more than $1200.* If you do not live to complete the deposits, your estate receives the sum then standing to your credit in your savings account.

For example, if you are age 30 (nearest birthday) you start the plan with $17. Thereafter you deposit only $10 a month for 9 years and 11 months. If you are then living you can have $1230.62 in cash, or $920 cash and continue your insurance for a small annual premium. If you should die just at the end of the tenth year before receiving the cash, your estate would be entitled to $3920.* If you should die after paying only one annual premium, the $3000 insurance would be available for your family just as it would if you had deposited for 5 or 10 years.

This plan may be carried out beyond the 10 years if desired—with increased cash available for you or your estate.

*Insurance dividends now actually being paid are 35% more than assumed in these estimates. Estimates also assume interest on the savings account to be accumulated at 4% per annum, compounded semi-annually, and insurance dividends deposited in savings account.

POWER SOLD TO STATE AT BIG PROFIT

One of the strongest arguments ever advanced for municipal ownership of lighting plants was contained today in the Metropolitan District Commission's report for 1928, filed at the State House.

The report discloses that electricity generated at State power stations is being sold at slightly more than one-half cent a kilowatt hour to private companies, which in turn retail it at eight and one-half and nine cents.

This vast difference in price is absorbed by the New England Power Co., the Edison Co. of Boston and the Clinton Gas Light Co., beneficiaries under the arrangement, it was pointed out today by the advocates of municipal ownership.

The power sold is generated by the stations maintained by the Metropolitan District Commission at the Wachusett Reservoir dam at Clinton and the Sudbury Reservoir dam in Sudbury.

Consumers of electricity in Clinton, about two miles from the location of the Wachusett station, pay a retail rate of nine cents per hour for residential lighting, to the Clinton Gas Light Co., according to that company's return, on file at the State Department of Public Utilities.

The Clinton company paid a dividend in 1928 amounting to 14 per cent on the par value of its capital stock. It buys all its electricity from the New England Power Co., according to its official report.

Customers of the Edison company in Sudbury and other communities in the vicinity of the Sudbury dam, pay a maximum lighting rate of eight and one-half cents per kilowatt hour, according to the Edison company's rate schedules on file at the State House.

The report of the metropolitan district commission shows that 13,-689,523 kilowatt hours were generated at both power stations in 1928. This quantity would be sufficient to supply electricity to a community three times the size of Belmont, whose consumption last year was close to four million kilowatt hours.

Approximately 9,000,000 kilowatt hours were generated at the power station at the Wachusett dam, and sold to the New England Power and Edison company at a rate of .0053 per kilowatt hour. All of the electricity generated at the power station at the Sudbury dam, amounting to 4,726,061 kilowatt hours, was sold to the Edison company, at a rate of six and one-quarter mills per kilowatt hour.

Legislators favoring municipal ownership pointed out today that the Commonwealth, through the Metropolitan District Commission, is generating enough electricity at the Wachusett Dam alone to supply not only the town of Clinton, but most of the communities in the vicinity.

Illegal Parkers' Cars Towed to Garage

The Waltham police have adopted a novel means of coping with illegal auto parking by patrons of a local dance hall.

Machines found parked in such a way as to obstruct private driveways are towed to a public garage by order of the police and when the owners call at the garage for their cars later they are obliged to pay the cost of towing and storage.

This method is being employed for the most part on Prospect st., where residents have complained to the police about parking conditions.

New Church Planned by Reformed Synod

Indianapolis, May 22 (AP)—With ministerial and lay delegates arriving from all parts of the United States, the 23d triennial session of the General Synod of the Reformed Church in the United States opened here today.

Two important issues are scheduled to come before the conference. One is a plan to create a new church, the United Church of America, with a membership of more than 1,000,000 communicants, through the merger of the Reformed Church, the Evangelical Synod of America, and the United Brethren Church.

HEARST MEDALS GIVEN TO BOYS

Bangor, Me., May 22—A shield was presented today to Bangor high school and individual medals to its rifle team in connection with the annual competition for the William Randolph Hearst trophy.

The Bangor high school team won third place in the junior division of the Eastern section. New Bedford, Mass., high school was first with 901 points, New Bedford high second team was second with 816 points, and Bangor high scored 779 points for third.

Individual medals were presented to Austin Miller, Fleetwood McKean, Harry Crowley, George McKenney and Charles Jacques, Jr., the team members.

Lieut. Alfred E. McKenney, first lieutenant of infantry, in charge of the high school R. O. T. C., received the shield for the school.

The high school regiment was reviewed on Broadway Park as part of the exercises by Col. Wilson B. Burtt, in charge of reserve officers' training corps units in New England, and Mayor John D. Wilson.

RUTH SKINNER TO WED SOON

Boston society was today informed of the engagement of Miss Ruth Alden Skinner, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ernest M. Skinner of 130 Beacon st., Chestnut Hill, to George Cross Scott, son of Mr. and and Mrs. Willard F. Scott of Beacon st., Waban.

The announcement was made at a bridge party at the home of Miss Skinner's sister, Mrs. Ernest Shenrock at 259 Savin Hill ave., Dorchester.

Miss Skinner was born in Dorchester 22 years ago, and graduated from Dorchester high school. Since that time she has studied languages and has traveled extensively.

Scott attended Amherst College, where he was a member of the S. A. T. C. in the war year. He is a member of Alpha Delta Phi Fraternity. He is in business in Boston.

No date for the wedding was announced.

NEW PLANS ARE URGED TO END CRIME WAVE

Chicago, May 22—Society stands challenged today to establish a new type of institution in which physician and judge would join in a common task of eliminating crime. The challenge was issued by delegates to the American Crime Study Commission.

The idea of such an institution was inspired by an address of Hollins R. Randolph, of Atlanta, president of the Stone Mountain Memorial Association, during the closing session of the annual meeting of the commission. Randolph told how 35 prominent Atlanta physicians had practically wiped out juvenile delinquency by means of a "Good Samaritan clinic."

Judge Ben Lindsey of Denver, noted for establishment of the House of Human Welfare, was instantly on his feet, commending the idea and urging its expansion into a new type of "social clinic" to aid the courts.

William Randolph Hearst was re-elected honorary president of the commission by unanimous vote. Miss Jane Addams honorary vice-president, and Judge Andrew A. Bruce, secretary.

Judge A. C. Backus of Milwaukee, was named president and the following members of the executive committee: Judge Oscar Hallan of St. Paul, justice of the Minnesota Supreme Court; Frank Murphy of Detroit, Hollins R. Randolph, Sanford Bates and Mr. Hearst.

SENTENCED TO CLINIC

Before adjourning the delegates passed resolutions, to President Hoover and Secretary Mellon against government "connivance" with vice in its method of collecting income tax from houses of vice.

President Backus was empowered to appoint a commission of five to investigate the efficacy of severe sentences as a deterrent to crime.

In describing how the Good Samaritan clinic had curbed crime in Atlanta, Randolph told how boys and girls, instead of being sentenced to juvenile home, had been "sentenced to the clinic."

"Every one of these boys and girls was found to be anemic," Randolph declared. "In addition, many had tonsilitis, bad teeth, sore ears or other physical ailments which were definitely found a source of their delinquency. And whenever we found a 'repeater,' we discovered that by curing his body we also cured his mind."

With prominent physicians donating their services, it was later necessary to appropriate only $10,000 additional a year by city and county to extend the clinic's work into the schools, Randolph declared.

"Atlanta found a definite way to stop crime at the source," he said. "The same work can be duplicated in every town in the United States."

"Society must establish a new institution in connection with its court," Judge Lindsey commented. "Medicine must join hands with the man on the bench to build up this new institution."

EXCESS LEGISLATION

Citing his own wide experience with juvenile crime and delinquency, Judge Lindsey pointed out that the power now vested in the judge makes it necessary for him to understand some branch of medicine, a great deal of psychology and even a certain amount of biology in order to decide justly.

The entire theory that severity of punishment deters crime was attacked by Judge Franz Eschweiler, justice of the Wisconsin Supreme Court, in an address inspired by a study of history back to the times of Dracula.

Other high points in the discussion are given below:

"Our crime problem will be greatly solved when we prevent juvenile delinquency. The successful program must begin not with the criminal and the law, but with the child, the home, the schools and the community.

"The school in the future will be our greatest factor in treating and preventing delinquency. It is here that early behavior problems should be detected and corrected.

"It is gratifying that this commission is considering the young offender and quite fitting that Mr. Hesser's famous editorial should contain the phrase: 'most criminals are not born, they are made.'—Miss Jessie Binford, operating director, Juvenile Protective Association of Chicago."

Elopers, Robbed, Sleep in Their Auto

Camden, N. J., May 22 (AP)—Robbed of all their money and having only sufficient gasoline in their automobile to reach here, an eloping couple were saved by police when they were found sleeping in their car near here after midnight.

They gave their names as Ralph Evans and wife, both 22, of Toledo, O., and said they had recently been married. They were accompanied by a cousin the bridegroom, Miss Mary Hoffman, who was taking the honeymoon trip with them.

ILEANA'S MATE MUST LIVE NEAR RUMANIA

Bucharest, Rumania, May 22 (AP)—When 20-year-old Princess Ileana, youngest daughter of Queen Marie, seeks a husband it will be a man whose home is near her own Rumania, so that occasional visits to mother and former home may be possible.

And, for the present at least, she is far more interested in securing a wife for her brother, Prince Nicholas, six years her senior, than a husband for herself.

A high palace authority said today that the beautiful princess did not intend to marry the Prince of the Asturias, eldest son of King Alphonso of Spain, in whose company she was seen frequently during a recent visit to Spain.

A SIX-DAY STORY

Thrilling Six-Day Novel by a Noted Author

WHAT HAS HAPPENED SO FAR

Kitty Grayson, 18, pretty and avid for life, leaves business school and goes to work. She meets Jimmie Barron, who aids her when she falls from a bus. In the office where she is working, Kitty meets Irma Paintor, who introduces her to Frank Hinkler. Irma tells Kitty to be nice to Hinkler, but Kitty's thoughts are full of Jimmie. She tried, however, to forget him, as she has not seen him since the day of their first encounter. Kitty is guest at a party which Hinkler gives at a roadhouse. He suggests that they all go to his bungalow, and Kitty sees Jimmie Barron, who tells her not to go. She tries to get out of going, but Hinkler insists she give him a "reason"!

(Now Go On With the Story)

CHAPTER 3.

MRS. GRAYSON dragged a little gray shawl about her shoulders.

There was the heavy tread of her husband's step inside the little hall!

"That you, Mary?" He walked into the kitchen.

"Nice of you to wait up for me." He sat down on a chair. "S'pose Kitten's long ago asleep in her bed?"

Her conscience smote her again as he padded off softly in his stockinged feet, careful lest he disturb his girl.

At last with a rush of flying feet Kitty came in.

"I told you no good would come of your going out with Irma Paintor!"

"Oh, mother, you didn't tell dad!"

"No, No. He doesn't know about it.

Kitty was twenty minutes late at the office.

As she took the cover off her typewriter she felt Irma's eyes upon her, quizzically.

"Mother's little home girl got back safely to the nest, I hope?"

Kitty regarded her with steady eyes. "Mr. Barron drove me home . . . if that's of any interest to you."

"What? Jimmie Barron?" Irma swung about. There was a look on

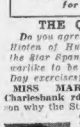
The Curious Quizzer

Newton Folk Answer His Daily Question and Pose for Picture

THE QUESTION

Do you agree with Rev. George Hinton of Huntington, Ct., that the Star Spangled Banner is too warlike to be sung at Memorial Day exercises?



MISS MARGARET NAGLE, Charlesbank rd.—There is no reason why the Star Spangled Banner can't be sung and played on Memorial Day. To say that it is too warlike is foolish. I can't see what the Rev. Mr. Hinton is thinking of. His statement sounds like that of a pacifist who is afraid this country's coming generation will be imbued with the spirit of warfare.

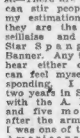
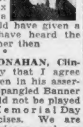
LEONARD MARTIN, Thornton st.—There are only two songs that can stir people, in my estimation, and they are the Marseillaise and the Star Spangled Banner. Any time I hear either one I can feel myself responding. I spent two years in Siberia with the A. E. F. and five months after the army left I was one of the six Americans in a small town. I would have given a lot of money to have heard the Star Spangled Banner then

* * *



MISS YERA MONAHAN, Clinton st.—I can't say that I agree with the Rev. Hinton in his assertion that the Star Spangled Banner should not be played at Memorial Day exercises. We are Americans, and our parents were Americans, either by birth or by adoption, so therefore, why should we take the backbone out of Americanism. To stop playing that glorious hymn at public ceremonies on Memorial Day would start the downfall of Americanism, and then where would we be?

* * *



JOHN CAVANAUGH, Middle st. The playing of that stirring song at public occasions, especially Memorial Day, is a thing that should be continued as long as we have a country to call the United States. There is absolutely no reason for calling it warlike, that I can see, and any attempt to have it stopped being played should be squelched in the beginning. Give us the "Star Spangled Banner" at every and all occasions, and we will continue to have a glorious country.

WALTHAM, THE PRETTY CITY, WHERE INDUSTRY RACES ALONG UNDER PEACEFUL SURFACE.

By WIN BROOKS

Governor Winthrop of the Massachusetts Bay Colony cut a trail through the woods some 11 or 12 miles west of Boston in the spring of 1632.

In his "Journal," the governor recorded his opinion that this was as far, probably, as the trail ever would have to be built.

Where that trail ended in 1632 is the city of Waltham, and on the very spot where the unpierced wilderness began there is erected a signpost: "To New York."

Governor Winthrop's trail became the Great Country Road, or Sudbury Road, and later the Boston Post Road. Where it once ended, the smooth macadam, traffic choked, winds toward the setting sun, and the cow path along Beaver Brook rolls across a continent now and ends at the Pacific.

Territory included in Waltham was a part of Watertown, land included in the great dividends. Beaver Brook plowlands, meadow grants and grants in lieu of township now making up the city.

PART OF WATERTOWN

All that district once was called the west precinct of Watertown. On December 14, 1737, Deacon William Brown, Daniel Benjamin, Jr., a trader, and Samuel Livermore petitioned that it be set aside as a separate township, and on January 4, 1738, the petition was granted, and Waltham was born.

Rev. Samuel Angier, who died in 1718, and who is buried in the old Waltham burying ground, moulded much of the early history of that section of Watertown which is now Waltham.

One of the pillars of Rev. Angier's church was Deacon Jonathan Sanderson and today three of the most prominent members of the community are Deacon Sanderson's descendants, the brothers Edmund L. Horace M. and Edwin H. Sanderson.

Of these, perhaps, Edmund L. Sanderson is the best known. A spare, gray man of pleasant mein, he has been secretary of the Waltham Historical Society since 1915, but not too immersed in the past to maintain an active partnership in one of the oldest established machine works.

Frederick A. Stearns is president of the society, and here again the present has forged into prominence a name closely related with Waltham's history, for the Stearns were among the first to settle in that district.

OLD FAMILIES THERE

Descendants of Samuel Livermore, one of the three successful petitioners for the Waltham township, live in Waltham today. So, too, do the Viles, the Stones, the Warrens and the Smiths, whose forefathers were pioneers in the old West Precinct of Watertown.

Waltham is not a city of magnificent homes and showplaces of the very wealthy. Neither has Waltham a "slums" nor a district of the poor.

It has fine old residences and fine new residences.

And Mayor Henry F. Beal, progressive, far-sighted, directs the destinies of the municipality from perhaps the finest city hall in Massachusetts. Waltham's public library building also is unsurpassed outside of Boston.

Waltham has been a city since 1884 and in two of the important changes in municipal government machinery Waltham has led the way. Secretary Earl J. Arnold of the Chamber of Commerce points out. Here the first provision was made for a single legislative board, and here also the modern city manager plan of modern government was first adopted.

The chamber has been established 12 years and numbers among its members the city's most substantial business men. Henry A. Turner is president, Fred H. Kirwin and Marshall Moulton vice-presidents and Chester Green treasurer.

WATCHES NOT ALL

Waltham's most famous industrial product is, of course, the watch, here in 1854 first successfully manufactured in the United States.

In Waltham, also, all the operations in the manufacture of cotton cloth were first performed under one roof. Here, about 1835, chalk crayons were invented. And here the water wheel was first put to commercial use in New England.

The Charles river, with its never failing source of water power, drew pioneer manufacturers to Waltham, and the first paper mill in the country was established by John Boies along its banks in 1788.

Governor Christopher Gore early in the 19th century built in Waltham a magnificent house of brick imported from England. This house is today the Waltham Country Club and its extensive grounds are the club's links.

Prospect Hill, Cedar Hill, the maze, the common, the slow Charles, dotted with canoes in the summer, Piety Corner, swift Stoney Brook and the slower Beaver, all lend their enchantment to the city's attractiveness.

Good homes, good citizens, good industry and good government has Waltham. A progressive city—yet in the sunlight it seems to drowse. And if you close your eyes and stop your ears to the blast of motor roar, you can imagine the cows meandering along the Beaver's then broad shallows and raising tired heads as the Sudbury coach goes clattering by.

A visit to Newton will be described tomorrow. Don't fail to follow this series.

STAGGERER GETS JAIL 2ND TIME

George Dubrey, alias James Kelley, was sent to Deer Island today on a drunkenness charge, with a three months' suspended sentence tacked to his conscience.

Yesterday, clutching a basket of wax flowers, he was arraigned for drunkenness, but after he explained that his staggering was only because of traffic dodging in an effort to save the flowers, Judge Duff let him off with one month—suspended.

Today the first name called in court was Dubrey's, and, without his flowers, he sailed right up to the bench and declared:

"Your Honor, I am ashamed of myself. Yesterday, after I left here, I started home, but in some way the devil tempted me and I found that I had a pint. I am so ashamed."

"Well," said Judge Duff, "add to your shame one month in the House of Correction and add to that three months' suspended sentence so that when you come out you will still have the consciousness of shame."

Prince of Wales in Air Once More

London, May 22 (AP)—The Prince of Wales took another of his not infrequent airplane trips today.

The prince motored from York House to Hendon Airdrome, where a machine was placed at his disposal. He donned flying kit and immediately started for Hucknall airdrome, near Nottingham, motoring thence to the show ground. He intended flying back to Hendon airdrome.

Dracut, May 22—The Board of Engineers of Dracut yesterday re-elected Fire Chief Guy H. Richardson for the fifth time. He has served for four years as head of the local fire-fighting department.

LANDS NINE IN BURNING AIRCRAFT

Elko, Nev., May 22 (AP)—Seven airplane passengers and two pilots came through a spectacular accident without injury near here today, when a big westbound Boeing airmail transport caught fire in midair, made a forced landing and burned in its tracks.

The tri-motored plane, carrying mail and passengers to San Francisco, was only a few minutes out of Elko when the left motor failed. Flames spouted from the dead engine and ignited the left wing. The transport was about 2000 feet in the air and landing on the desert without lights was a matter of much guesswork.

Chief Pilot Hugh Parker pointed the plane downward at a sharp angle and it dived toward the earth like a huge firebrand, the flames trailing far behind. Parker was fortunate in having descended toward a fairly level spot and the plane made a smooth landing.

Plans Education of Isolated Children

Washington, May 22 (AP)—Plans to provide educational facilities by means of correspondence for the children of army and navy officers, lighthouse keepers and other government employes at isolated posts were announced today by the interior department.

Secretary Wilbur said the courses would provide instruction in all primary and secondary school grades and would be supplied through the bureau of education. The service, he explained, will be an attempt to overcome some of the disadvantages confronting government employes sent to remote places.

METS TO HOLD HORSE SHOW

One of the greatest free public entertainments Greater Boston ever has known will be presented on next Saturday when the Metropolitan Driving Club holds it annual horse show at its grounds on the Brighton Speedway.

The program includes 58 classes in which there are 475 entries, making it the largest show this club has sponsored. Judging will begin at 9:30 a. m. and will continue without interruption until completed, which will be in the evening.

The best-known horses in this section will compete as the show comes just prior to that of the Chestnut Hill organization. Such stables as those of Sydney Winslow, Jr.; Arthur L. Black, Albion L. Dandreth, Louis K. Liggett, Chester Howe, General Francis Peabody, Arthur Lewis, George S. West and others, will be well represented.

In the saddle horse division there will be an interesting competition for a leg on the $300 cup awarded the best horse. Last year this trophy was captured by Miss Ann Arnold, shown by Miss Marian Winslow but the cup must be won three times to become a permanent possession.

There will be dashes for hunters and races in the roadster classes. Band concerts will add to the pleasure of the day and luncheon will be served in the clubhouse to exhibitors. Josiah P. Wescott is chairman of the committee in charge.

The Metropolitan Driving Club grounds are easily reached by automobile and are adjacent to street car lines.

MARINES PLAY N. E. SCHEDULE

The hard-hitting Marine Baseball team, which has had a highly successful season on its home grounds at Quantico, Va., is beginning its campaign against New England nines. Two games are to be played with the Naval Training Station at Newport, R. I., today and tomorrow, and the team faces the University of New Hampshire at Durham, N. H., Saturday. The leathernecks meet Boston College on June 10, and two days later will face Harvard at Cambridge for the final game of their season's schedule.

Other contests with New England teams include games with Dartmouth, at Hanover, May 28; with the Detroit Athletic Club, at Worcester, May 30; Colby College at Waterville, June 3 and Bates College at Lewiston, Me., June 4. Prior to the Boston and Harvard games the sea soldiers will go to New York for games with the New York Athletic Club, in that city, and the Crescent Athletic Club in Brooklyn.

A thrilling air circus will be staged by Marine aviators at the Durham, Hanover, Boston and Cambridge games. The aviators will perform stunts and a parachute jump from a plane will be made by one of the Marine fliers.

At Durham and Hanover the plans will be piloted by Lieuts. Hayne D. Hoyden, W. R. Hughes and T. J. McQuade, while Sergt. W. J. Dewald will pilot a two-seater, from which Sergt. R. M. Ryder will make the parachute leap. At Boston and Harvard the stunting planes will be piloted by Capt. J. T. Moore, Lieut. W. R. Hughes and Ch. Marine Gunner Elmo Reagan, while Dewald and Ryder will repeat their parachute stunt.

Prior to leaving Quantico the sea soldier nine had won 15 out of 20 games. The team is piloted by John T. Keady, a widely known coach, who was both player and coach with New England game for years. While playing its Northern schedule, the team will make its base at Portsmouth, N. J.

Trinity Nine at Williams Today

Williamstown, May 22—Fresh from its shutout victory over Princeton, the Williams nine plays another home game here today when Trinity will be opposed on Weston Field. Wolcott or Bright will do the hurling for Williams, while Coach Art Fox will probably stand pat on the same lineup which vanquished the tigers in the recent contest.

Singmaster, the Purple's pitching ace, will be saved for Saturday's game with Wesleyan, which will be a little three meeting.

Erdos Leads Nimrods

Gene Erodos, a two-year veteran on the City College rifle team and twice a member of the Lavender team that won the Eastern Intercollegiate rifle championship, was elected Captain of the C. C. N. Y. 1930 sharpshooters, yesterday at a meeting of the lettermen of the team.

SOX IN FINAL WITH MACKS

Philadelphia, May 22—Today is getaway day for the Red Sox and Manager Bill Carrigan will send his athletes into the fray to achieve victory in their final road game prior to their first long home stay in which all of the Western teams will be met, after the New York Yankee series is disposed of.

Big Ed Morris is due to pitch, as Carrigan is very anxious to return home with a victory over the A's to his credit. Bill would have preferred to have saved the husky Alabaman for the opener with the Yanks, but, seemingly, has no other choice than to put him on the mound today if victory is to be achieved. Just now, though Russell and MacFayden have shown signs of winning. Ed is the only twirler who may be regarded as a sure thing bet for the Red Sox.

Charlie Ruffing, on whom Carrigan counted to have a big year, has to date been a failure. When he is not being batted, Charlie is not with the same disastrous result. He showed great form during the training period down in Florida, but something has gone wrong and Charlie seems unable to deliver even a fair game at this writing.

Connie Mack, who is riding high, has the choice of several hurlers to send against the Bostonians but is likely to pitch Grove. Lefty just now is at the peak of his career and is very effective against the Red Sox. Mack is determined to keep out ahead of the Yanks and figures that a win today will help a whole lot. The elongated manager of the A's has no particular dread of the Senators, whom his team faces while the Red Sox are taking on the Yanks but would like to start off with a clean slate in the present series.

HUB ENGLISH IN BATTLE WITH MALDEN

By DICK McSWEENEY

Schoolboy baseball players are hoping that rain does not interfere with today's extensive program of diamond contests, for the tussles listed this p. m. are important from the pennant point of view.

One of the most interesting games of the day is played in Malden, where Boston English is guest. It looks like a fine pitching battle between the Blue and Blue ace, Lefty Tamulis, and Jim Kelley of Malden. Boston English hasn't been defeated in its fray with Hub nines although it has tasted defeat at the hands of suburban outfits. Coach Daley won't be able to see his team in action as he is suffering from septic sore throat.

Rindge and Cambridge Latin brighten the Cambridge horizon with their argument at Russell Field. The city championship is at stake and the fact that both clubs are Suburban League rivals, tends to make the contest all the more alluring to the fan.

Lefty McFayden of the Cantabs' hurling staff is still on the bench with a fractured arm and Coach McDonald will use either Casey or Lekaskas against the Rindge boys.

RINDGE BATTING WELL

Rindge has a hard-hitting, fine catching outfit, thanks to Westberg, and smooth pitching. It is a well-balanced team and will be up there when the season ends Saturday will find the mound for Rindge against the Cantabs.

Brookline is out to pin a defeat on Somerville at Dilboy Field today. Brookline hasn't had much success this year on the diamond, because it has lacked veteran material, but Coach Fitzgerald believes that his charges are now rounding into as capable ball players as any suburban outfit may boast of.

Madden and O'Neil have been carrying the pitching burden satisfactorily. The fielding and catching of the club are just above average.

Somerville sees no barrier to the suburban flag in this tilt with Brookline. The Red and Blue has snappy fielders in Perry and Bill Bettenourt. Graham and Escott are shining lights on the outfield. Hall and Hutchinson are working nicely in the box and either one of these youths will hurl against Brookline.

Lynn Classical goes for Medford with the idea of humbling the Blue and White. Routhaska is twirling well for the Lynn club and no doubt is to toss them to the Medford batters.

LAWRENCE VS. CUSHING

Leavitt or Spalding will face the invaders and given enough support from the rather erratic Medford infield, may be able to put this one away in the Mystic victory collection.

Another game that has taken the attention of scholastic baseball fans is the Lawrence Academy-Cushing Academy setto, scheduled at Cushing's grounds.

Lawrence Academy has been piling up a large list of wins this season behind the fine pitching of Frank Millikan and Red Hunt. The team's batting is especially noteworthy. Coach Taylor is making ready for the Lawrence boys with in private school ranks.

Other diamond quarrels which will draw crowds are Huntington at Melrose, Wakefield at Woburn, Haverhill at Amesbury, Wentworth Institute at Middlesex School, B. C. High at Marlboro, Saugus at Revere, Blonehem at Arlington, Belmont Hill at Weston, Groton at Milton, Waltham at Concord, Marblehead at Winthrop, N E. Institute at Pomfret, Hyannis at Tabor Academy, Athol at Holyoke, Johnson at Methuen.

Fenway Park season ticket holders may be deprived of their courtesy passes unless, in the future, they are careful to live up to the agreement under which such tickets are issued by the Red Sox management.

A number of season ticket holders have, during the current season, allowed friends to use passes, in direct violation of the printed rule on the back of the pass, which says that the ticket will be taken up by the management unless presented at the press gate by the person to whom it is issued.

To add insult to injury, many of these individuals, not at all entitled to a pass in the first place, have gone through the press gate, then either have attempted to pass the ticket to a friend standing near the press gate, or have gone to the top of the grandstand and tossed the pass to a second "sportsman," who would attempt to enter the field.

The Red Sox management is to deprive many season ticket holders of their courtesy season tickets unless this annoying condition is soon remedied.

MR. BOSTON by JACK CONWAY

TOMMY LOUGHRAN, world's light heavyweight champion, was getting his hands taped in preparation for a workout when Mr. Boston stepped into his dressing room at Kelley & Hayes' Gym at No. 53 Hanover st. Harry Kelley and Doc Jimmy Brown had furnished the title holder with all of their de luxe equipment.

"How were things in Chicago, Tommy?" asked Mr. Boston.

"Everything turned out fine," replied the champion. "I boxed Mickey Walker under tough conditions, but as I ended up with the decision I was satisfied.

"It was sick for a while after reaching Chicago. The Field-Thompson bout, which was staged at a rival club a few nights before my tussle with Walker, ended up in a race riot. To add to the chaos, there was a fire at the Chicago Stadium at 8 o'clock on the night of my show. This naturally kept down the attendance."

"Have you ever seen Schaaf box?" pressed Mr. Boston.

"I got a look at him in one of the preliminary matches the night Shirley and Maloney fought in New York," answered Tommy. "I think he is a tough fellow and that he will make me extend myself to the limit to win."

"WHAT are your plans after your tussle with Schaaf?"

"I am matched to defend my title against Jimmy Braddock for the New York Garden at the Yankee Stadium in July. I feel I shall defeat Braddock. I shall then vacate my championship and cast my lot with the heavyweights. I think I shall prove I am the best of the lot."

"How much are you weighing now?" queried Mr. Boston.

"I'm around 187 pounds. I find trouble reducing to the class limit of 175 pounds. I am 26 years of age and I believe I shall keep growing for at least two more years. If I give up making weight, I shall develop into a 190 pounder. They can then bring on all of the heavyweight contenders.

"I do not think any of the so-called punchers has a chance of winning the title. A clever, experienced boxer will always cut down the slugger.

"THE late Tex Rickard always had hopes of some rough, tough fellow springing up from nowhere and punching his way to the championship. Ring records prove that such a type of battler only comes along once in five or six generations.

"Jim Jefferies won the heavyweight championship after engaging in about 11 bouts, but he was the exception. Experience and skill will usually take care of the so-called killers of the ring.

"I have engaged in some 120 bouts and believe me I have the necessary experience and science to reach the top of my class."

"WHO do you think will win the Paulino-Schmeling bout?" asked Mr. Boston.

"I have never seen Schmeling box," went on Loughran. "He must be a promising youth, but it is a question whether he has had sufficient experience.

"I never thought a great deal of Paulino. He a merely a rugged fellow who can absorb a lot of punishment. He keeps his guard high and keeps coming forward while in the ring.

"I always felt I could lick the Basque. If I were to fight him I would attack with my left hand for five or six rounds. After I had closed Paulino's eyes, I would then start shooting right handers for the body. Such a plan of battle would beat him."

A FEW minutes later Loughran was on the gym floor. He punched the light bag, boxed a couple of rounds with Jack Wolfe, and ended up by skipping rope.

"The champ looks as though he is ready to go," piped Mr. Boston as the workout came to a close.

Eagles Prepare for Fordham Battle

By JOHN GILLOOLY

THE Eagles are aiming for Fordham.

Boston College and the Maroons meet in New York on Saturday afternoon in a game that carries some significance, so far as the Maroon and Gold is concerned. Manhattan, the team which B. C. walloped last week by 14 to 0, will be played on Friday, but this should be nothing more than a warmup for Saturday's tangle with Fordham.

Jimmy Murphy, Fordham's right-handed flinger, is worrying Coach Duffy not a little. Murphy nearly had a win over B. C. in his debut in the first game at the Heights, which the Eagles copped by a 5 to 3 count.

Murphy allowed B. C. but seven hits, and would have pitched the game to victory if his mates had given him support in the pinches. He shut out West Point last week 7 to 0, and seems to be a much improved hurler since his Newton performance. So much so, that the Yankees are to sign him at the close of the Fordham season.

Coach Duffy has ambitions of seeing his team go through the next three games, with Manhattan, Fordham and Georgetown, without defeat. According to the mentor's psychology, such a showing would prime his team for the season's objective game at Fitton Field with Holy Cross a week from tomorrow.

A defeat by Fordham or George town is likely to upset B. C. The F. C. coach, therefore, didn't add to yesterday's worries with any tears because the Providence game was rained out.

The B. C. welcomed day off by the B. C. coach for he was troubled with a cracked and crippled pitching staff. O'Connor was still lagging a bit after working Saturday, and Hugh McNulty's lame arm ought to be around by that time, according to the doctor's prediction. Then Coach Duffy will have his first two hurlers to use against Fordham

Miss Brewer Eliminated in W. G. A. Title Play

1928 RUNNER-UP IS DEFEATED 4 AND 2

W. G. A. Second-Round Results

Mrs. E. H. Baker, Jr., defeated Mrs. F. A. Stanwood 4 and 3.

Mrs. C. F. Eaton, Jr., defeated Mrs. W. G. Dow 2 up.

Miss Margaret Curtis defeated Miss Katherine Field one up (19 holes).

Mrs. Walter Tufts, Jr., defeated Mrs. G. L. Wrenn, 2nd, one up (20 holes).

Miss Frances Stebbins defeated Miss "Pinkie" Vahey 7 and 6.

Mrs. E. C. Stone defeated Mrs. C. E. Deland one up.

Mrs. D. M. Belcher defeated Miss Martha Brewer 4 and 2.

Mrs. R. K. Byers defeated Miss Darthea Bryant 3 and 2.

By BILL GRIMES

In the second round of the W. G. A. championship played today at the Charles River Country Club, the favorites came through with one exception.

The outstanding upset of this round was the elimination of Miss Martha Brewer of Weston, who was a finalist in the championship last year, by Mrs. Donald M. Belcher of Winchester a former title holder.

By far the hardest fought match was the one which brought together Mrs. E. C. Stone of Belmont Springs and Mrs. C. E. Deland of Pine Burn. Due to a misunderstanding at the second hole, Mrs. Stone became upset, then she lost four holes out of the next six and was four down at the turn.

During the inward journey she recovered her composure, made up the four holes which she lost on the outward trip and won the match on the home hole, where she put her second shot within three feet of the cup.

MRS. BAKER WINS.

Mrs. E. H. Baker, Jr., the present title holder, had a fine match with Mrs. F. A. Stanwood of Wellesley for 12 holes. The defending champion was one up at the turn, but a partial stymie cost her the 10th hole, squaring the match. After they had halved the 11th Mrs. Baker put on steam and won the next four holes and the match, 4 and 3

One of the best matches for competition and scoring was played by Mrs. C. F. Eaton, Jr., and Mr. W. G. Dow, both of Wellesley Mrs. Eaton picked up a two-hole advantage early in the match and was out in 42. After increasing her lead to three up Mrs. Eaton saw her advantage slip away, and they became squared. She went back to two up winning the 15th and 16th which made her dormie two.

At the seventeenth Mrs. Low chipped in for a won one to lose at the home hole, two up

Although Miss Margaret Curtis former National and District champion, was not playing within strokes of her usual game, having two four-putt greens and no less than 8 three-putters, she did manage to defeat Miss Katherine Field of Thornley Lea by getting a 4 on the extra hole after her opponent had her dormie two

Miss Francis Stebbins of Pine Burn trampled over Miss Pinkie Vahey of Belmont Spring to the tune of 7 and 6. Miss Vahey was never able to get started and after she had won the first hole with a 7, and halved the next two donned the next five in a row and was four down at the turn

NIP AND TUCK FIGHT.

Mrs. Donald M. Belcher of Winchester and Miss Martha Brewer had a nip and tuck match which finally went to the Winchester player by a 3 and 2 margin. Mrs. Belcher was out in 45 to be one up, but she allowed the match to be squared at the 11th where she had her second 3-putt green. Mrs. Belcher was one up when they reached the two long par 5 holes 15th and 16th, and perfect golf on these holes gave her the match 3 to 2

In the Mrs. R. K. Byers-Miss Darthea Bryant match the competition was keen especially on the outward holes in which Mrs. Byers overcame a two-hole advantage to square the match at the turn.

Mrs. Byers went into the lead at the first time by chipping in for a 3 at the 12th and although Miss Bryant won the 14th with a par, the Hoole-Whitelck girl came back with wins at the 15th and 16th for a 3 and 2 verdict

In the second extra hole match of the day, Mrs. Walter Tufts, Jr., of the Worcester Country Club defeated Mrs. George L. Wrenn, 2d, of Dedham in 20 holes.

Favorites Yet in Title Golf Play

Greenwich, Ct., May 22 (AP)—The second round of match play in the women's metropolitan golf championship today found all of the favorites still in the running

Maureen Orcutt of the White Beeches Club, Haworth, N. J., title holder for the past three years, indicated in the first round that she is not going to surrender the title without a fight. She crushed Mrs Lloyd Wimpfheimer, Century Club, under an 8 and 7 score

Helen Hicks of Hempstead, favored to meet Miss Orcutt in the finals, was carried to the home green by Mrs. Arnold Jackson of Greenwich

Mrs. Leo Federman of Glen Oaks, another of the favorites, easily defeated Mrs. Henry March of North Shore, 4 and 2. Katherene Beach Montclair, N. J., had the hardest job of all to get into the second round, beating Rosalie Knapp, women's national, only after 20 holes of play

Hoover Told Army and Navy to Agree

Washington May 22 (INS)—Rep Hamilton Fish (R.), New York told President Hoover today he expects to effect a reconciliation between the athletic organizations of West Point and the Annapolis Naval Academy that will revive their annual football classic.

Fish told the President he has a compromise plan" which he is confident both institutions will accept. The teams broke apart over the three-year player eligibility rule.

Marathon Winner in St. Finbar Games

SEVERAL long-distance runners of note will compete in the Knights of St. Finbar "Irish" games, to be held at Russell Field, Cambridge, Thursday afternoon, May 30

Already the entries of Johnny Miles, hero of the Boston Marathon, has been received, while such runners as "Whitey" Michelson of the Millrose A. A., New York; Hal Rossi of the Finnish American A. C. and Smiling Jimmy Henigan of the Dorchester Club will be among the list of contenders.

Little Johnny Miles sent his entry to the Irish committee yesterday, and stated that he will arrive in Boston at the end of the week to start training for the coming 10-mile race. Since his victory in the Boston Marathon Miles has been taking it easy. His race at the "Irish" games against Michelson and Henigan will be his first serious start.

Running 10 miles instead of the full Marathon is not to Miles' liking, for he would rather run 20 miles, 385 yards. Yet he is confident that he can beat all the American milers over the modified distance as well.

If Miles can show any of the form that he did in the Hopkinton to Boston canter he will be returned a winner. Already he has beaten Michelson over the modified route as well as the full Marathon and he is sanguine of victory.

Besides the entries of the "Big Three" in the coming race Joe McNamara who is handling the entries announces that the Dorchester Club will enter a full team of 30 runners to try and keep the beautiful prize in this country.

In the open handicap event that will be held as a curtain raiser to the 10 mile race the Boston A. A. will enter its full team. Entries for the events should be sent to J. J. McNamara, 4 Ellis st., Roxbury Mass

Epsom Derby Entries Are Scratched

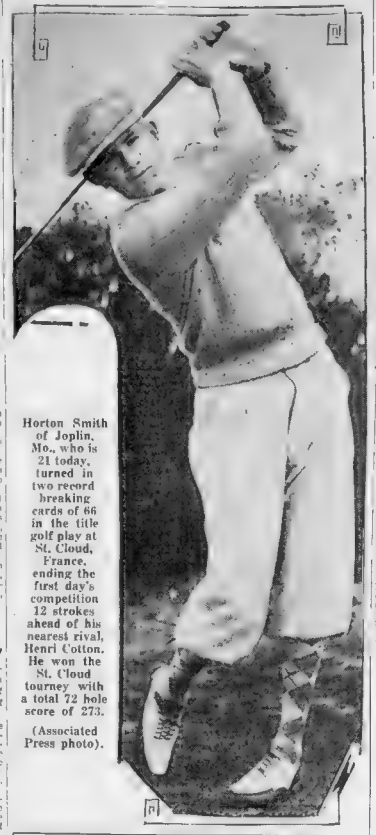
Epsom, Eng., May 23 (AP)—W Wertheimer's Lafayette and A. Falcon's Tremendus were scratched today from the Epsom Derby to be run June 5.

Sir G. Bullough's Ellanville was also scratched from the Oaks Stakes to be run at the same meeting two days later.

Girls' Game Halted

Rain caused a postponement of the girls' baseball game scheduled between the Arlington and Lexington high school girls' nines.

AMAZES FRENCHMEN



Horton Smith of Joplin, Mo., who is 21 today, turned in two record breaking cards of 66 in the title golf play at St. Cloud, France, ending the first day's competition 12 strokes ahead of his nearest rival, Henri Cotton. He won the St. Cloud tourney with a total 72 hole score of 273. (Associated Press photo).

Notes Girls Lack of Interest in Golf

By JOHNNY FARRELL
American Open Golf Champion

DURING my stay in England I met many enthusiastic golfers, but there is none more thoroughly addicted to the game than Miss Enid Wilson, the woman champion of her country, who, though she is only now verging on 19, is considered almost a match for Joyce Wethered, the greatest of all women players.

Miss Wilson, though young, has much of the technique of a veteran player and is very progressive in her outlook on the game. Just now Miss Wilson is busy trying to bestir the youthful ladies of England to take a more serious interest in golf. She has discovered that there is a marked absence of promising girl golfers in her native land.

Her remarks opened my eyes to the fact that this is particularly true of golf in America. The girls don't seem to take the interest in golf that boys do. This may be because they haven't the opportunities of observing players as boys do during their apprenticeship as caddies. Once in a while a girl like Helen Hicks will come over to make folk perk up and take notice, but the intervals between such appearances are very long.

IF perhaps is true, too, that girls in school have not the opportunity of getting out on the links as readily as they have for reaching the hockey rink, or tennis court, or the swimming pool. Unless a girl inherits the golf fever, she probably is more inclined toward other sports than she is toward golf.

Miss Wilson suggests that girls should adopt golf as a definite career. At present it is her opinion that they do not enter into that sport seriously enough.

"It is essential," Miss Wilson says, "to have a very high ideal and to keep on trying until the object is achieved. So many young girls are quite content to muddle around their home course without making any serious effort to improve their play. Perhaps three or four years elapse before they make up their minds to tackle the game in a business-like manner and become proficient.

"This is probably due to the fact that golf is such a difficult game and they do not receive sufficient encouragement to tide them over some of the hardest rocks. There is such an enormous amount to learn, and so much careful planning to be done, that even the most determined players are inclined to flag at times.

"Somehow there has arisen a foolish idea that, given much encouragement, girl golfers are rather prone to develop swollen heads. So far as my experience goes, a number of them would profit by the possession of more self-confidence. Frequently an apathetic exterior is assumed in an attempt to conceal a feeling of shyness. Every dog has its day and I think it is up to those who have had their innings to hold out a helping hand to the younger generation.

New Racing Course for Outboard Boats

Newport, R. I., May 22—At a meeting of the board of governors of the Narragansett Bay Motor Boat Regatta Association at the chamber of commerce here, it was decided to hold the third annual motor boat regatta on the Brenton's Cove course instead of off the Naval Training Station as has been the custom

The new course is calmer and therefore more adapted to the outboard races, the site is also near the Ida Lewis Yacht Club, which will be ready for use as a yachting and racing center early in the summer

Revere Boxer Wins; Boston Boy Loses

Portland, Me., May 22—Bob Jasse of Revere took 11 of the 12 rounds from Willie Oster of New London to box his way to decisive victory at the Arena A. A. in the semi-final Mickey McLernon, New London, defeated George Walker, Boston, in six rounds. In one of the preliminaries, Jack Thompson, Cambridge, knocked out Jimmy Sullivan, Portland, in two rounds.

Boomer's 61 Ranks With Greatest Rounds

St. Cloud, France, May 22 (AP)—Horton Smith, United States pro returned a score of 70 in the third round of the French professional golf championship and led the field at 54 holes with a score of 202.

Smith was five strokes ahead of Aubrey Boomer, the St. Cloud pro, in spite of Boomer's almost unbelievable 61 on his third round.

When Boomer finished his round of 31 he was shaking like a leaf, and was so nervous that he said he could hardly sign his card "I never putted like that before in my life," he remarked

Aubrey Boomer's sex actional 61 will take rank as the lowest single round in an open tournament of the first class. This same slim, young British pro already held a record, a score of 65 in the third round of the French open at La Boulie in 1922. Over a course of 6646 yards, Boomer went out in 31 and returned in 34.

In August, 1913, playing in the open championship of the Lucerne Lakes," George Duncan scored a 61 over the Axenfels course, 28 out and 28 in. He played the first 26 holes in 62, 56, a total of 118 and finished with a 72 hole score of 283. However, the Axenfels course

Nephew Set Down for Fouling His Uncle

New York, May 22 (AP)—The battle of wits and tracks between Uncle Jack Garner and Nephew Willie Garner had ended—at least temporarily.

Willie, who came east this spring to ride for Joseph E. Widener and Mrs. Graham Fair Vanderbilt, was deputized by the stewards at Belmont Park for "battling" and fouling his uncle

Most severe punishment was promised the lad if he continued his practice of abusing his uncle

Reading Club of Twilight League Changes Management

OWNER TO BUILD UP NINE

At the Twilight League meeting, held at the Quincy House, the Reading membership changed hands, Frank Tanner, who had had the club for several years running it for Frank Donovan, stepping aside in favor of Harry Herholz heimer, a prominent Reading sportsman. The Reading list of players was handed over to the new manager, who proposes to strengthen the club.

The league will open on Friday night at the Dorchester Town Field where Harry Galvin's Dorchester Club will entertain Roslindale.

Quincy will open Saturday against Revere at the Fore River Field Revere, taking the place of Chelsea is heading for a strong nine under Manager Frank Johnson.

Revere will play Sunday baseball this summer and has arranged for an auspicious opening at Revere on Sunday against Dorchester.

Quincy, which is now a member of the league will also open on Sunday against South Boston, runner-up to Quincy last year for the championship. The Salem team will play at Donovan Field, Salem, and a strong team has been drawn to give Southie a battle. Southie dropped its opening game last year yet reached through to the championship of the first half. Managers McCarthy and McMahon will have several new faces in their Southie lineup.

South Boston had originally intended to open tomorrow evening, but on account of the weather chose to delay its opening game until Saturday. South Boston and Dorchester are likely to play on their home parks on alternate Sundays.

HY DIAMOND TO MEET PARKER

Big Boy Rawson, king of knockout punchers, will head the big parade of boxers into the Arena next Monday night, when he will meet Ralph Smith of Los Angeles in a 10-round battle.

The bout will be preceded by perhaps the most brilliant card of the season, and since Jimmy Jerome will prevail Col. Bob McKirdy is looking forward to entertaining a capacity crowd. In the "underneath" card, Hy Diamond, the jewel of the West End, and Charlie Parker, hobnobbing South End lightweight, will renew their bitter feud in a 10-round bout, which will probably attract as much attention as the main bout, while such popular youngsters as George Carney of North End, Leslie Baker of Watertown, George Russo of the North End, Jack McCarren of Somerville and Johnny Daley of Waltham will appear in the preliminaries.

Rawson, the most sensational punch-pourer to start surging to the top since the name of Jack Dempsey first became prominent, will attempt to score his 15th knockout victory in 16 fights against the rugged heavyweight from the Pacific coast. Of his 15 victories 10 were scored in the first round and five in the second.

The Diamond-Parker bout should add another juicy chapter to the history of local boxing. They are in an eight-round go on account with the flashy Diamond outpointing the hard-hitting Parker and winning the decision at the end of eight savage rounds. Parker was not satisfied with the results, and neither were the customers.

In a six-rounder George Carney, promising young middleweight protege of Sammy Fuller, will tackle Jack Dorfick, former West End amateur star, while in the four-rounders Johnny Daley, former national amateur featherweight champion, will be paired with Goggie Schwartz of Cambridge, George Russo, former junior national lightweight champion, with Jack McCarren of Somerville, New England champion for three years; and Leslie Baker of Watertown, national amateur welterweight champion of 1927 with Tommy Burns of Lynn.

Dempsey Puts White-Yoakum Thriller Among Modern Classics of the Ring

By JACK DEMPSEY

EVERY RINGMAN who has battled for any length of time within the hempen strands has run afoul of tough and still tougher battles. Many of them since have gone into the history books as among the most bitterly contested in ring annals. And to that collection should be added—if the addition hasn't already been made—the Charlie White-Stanley Yoakum fight of 1914 in which I was packed 19 rounds of wild and cyclonic action.

It was a stand-up and smash fight unlike few others in modern annals.

"If I hi. Yoakum once, I must have hit him 400 times in those five rounds," says Charlie. "His face was so badly battered that he no longer looked like the Yoakum of the first round. His was what police reporters describe as 'a gruesome sight.' And my own fists, from the pounding I had dealt out, were so badly cut and bleeding that my gloves and bandages were dyed red long before my seconds cut them off at the end of the fight!"

"Yet, for 17 rounds I couldn't drop Yoakum nor stop his ceaseless rushes.

"In the 18th, near the middle of the round, I met him coming in with a right-hander. I knew that a rush would follow. He was like that! Nail him hard and think you had broken his jaw and, a second later, he was tearing at you more vigorously and viciously than ever!

"The inevitable rush came. I stepped in with him, cocked the left, summoned every ounce of strength in my body—and then let it go. It hit Soakum on the chin, his knees buckled, his body quivered, and down he went, seemingly dead cold—out for the next million years!

"At the count of 'six,' I took a look at Yoakum stretched flat on the floor. He was the most helpless human I had ever seen in my life. So, figuring the fight was over, I walked leisurely to my corner. I heard 'seven,' 'eight' and—then a wild roar from the crowd! Whirling around I saw Soakum Yoakum rushing at me.

"A GHOST wouldn't have surprised me half as much. I [illegible] Yoakum was from an [illegible] shifted his attack to the body. [illegible] poured into it a blistering [illegible] of lefts and rights, but, the only time he drove Yoakum back was by the force of his smashes.

"Soakum" Yoakum never had earned in retreat under fire. And a White blazed away, Yoakum volleyed back at him and through the 19th, and up to the end of the 17th, I slug it to the finish. His face was an unrecognizable mess—his body, a ridge of welts and bruises, crimson streaked in some places, turning black or purple in others. But that great fighting heart of his was not missing a single beat, and he tore into me with the wild hope of flattening me before the end of the 20th, knowing that was his only chance to win.

"There was a bit of slugging in mid-ring. I feinted, pulled Soakum in close, drove a right under the heart and as he was rebounding from that, I hooked for the chin with my left. The blow was so terrific that it jarred my whole body and I wasn't sure that I hadn't smashed my hand or arm. But in half a second I knew that, if it had done nothing else, it had flattened 'Soakum' Yoakum.

"'Soakum' was down. The referee leaned over him, droning the count. I stood alongside him and counted in unison with him. No back turning this time: no useless journey to my corner. If 'Soakum' was going to get up again, I wanted to be right there and see the miracle performed. But that final smash was too much—even for the iron jaw and the durability of the gamest man I ever fought in my lifetime.

"For Stanley was through—a kayo victim in the 19th round, after absorbing gamely 10 times as many punches as I ever handed on any other fighter all through my fighting years."

Harvard Golfers in Telegraph Match

This afternoon, for the first time since Billy Murray's football team defeated the University of Oregon football team in the Tournament of Roses on Jan. 1, 1920, the Crimson and Oregon will meet in an athletic contest.

The meeting will be over the transcontinental wire, with the Harvard and Oregon golf club swingers matching strokes via the circuit for the 19th jauntily, and ready to criterion of par.

MALONEY BOUT FOR SCHAAF IF HE WINS

Ernie Schaaf, the Big Bertha of the heavyweights, expects to bunch his way into a meeting with Jimmy Maloney, South Boston idol, if he is victorious over Tommy Loughran, light heavyweight champion of the world, in the conflict at the Boston Garden on Friday night. After trailing Maloney for more than a year, there are now indications that Schaaf will be given the opportunity of realizing his ambition for the former sailor always has insisted that he can take the measure of the Peninsula man.

Eddie Mack has started negotiating for this match, yet Schaaf must win from Loughran, as the latter also is anxious to return here, and he has voiced his willingness to step into the same ring with Maloney.

Schaaf insists that he will beat Loughran in the approaching bout, in spite of the fact that the light heavyweight king probably will enter the ring as the favorite. Schaaf points out that he has never had any trouble with clever men. All his trouble has been met in the ring was against tough punchers.

Harold Mays, Con O'Kelly and Benny Touchstone, three of the cleverest big men in the ring, were easy for Schaaf, and as all three of them are of the same fighting type as Loughran, the former sailor does not expect much trouble with the champion.

Harry Smith of New York and Gary Leach of Syracuse, the hard-hitting middleweights, who clash in the semifinal, are said to be among the outstanding contenders for the middleweight crown, and although both are strangers to Hub fans, according to Promoter Mack, they will provide one of the best fights of the season. They will meet in an eight-rounder.

In the six-round bouts, Joe Mack of Manchester meets Harry Sabine of Boston, while Joe Barlowe, New York, opposes Jack Wolf, Philadelphia. Joe Zelinsky, Syracuse, opposes Joe Taveleri, North End, while Joe Accetta, Providence, takes on Walter Peters, Germany.

Salo Has Lead of 21 Minutes

Monahans, Tex., May 22 (AP)—Fights for first and third places in the 2,000-mile Jim C. C. Pyle cross-country race continued today as the runners headed for Pecos, 35 miles from here.

At today's start the lead of 21 minutes and 30 seconds held by Johnny Salo, Passaic, N. J., over Pete Gavuzzi of England, remained unchanged since last Saturday. The two runners tied again on yesterday's 38-mile lap from Odessa, finishing in third place. Giusto Umex of Italy, and Sam Richman, New York, third and fourth in elapsed time, respectively, tied for first place. Richman has finished first four successive days and cut the time between third and fourth places to a little more than 13 hours.

KOLOFF QUITS SONNY'S CAMP

For the first time since he won his title from Strangler Lewis, Gus Sonnenberg will be without the support of Dan Koloff when he squares off with Mario Plestina, the trust buster, in the feature match at the Arena next Tuesday night.

Koloff has been Sonnenberg's trainer since the day Sonny started preparing for his second bout with Lewis. Since he won the title, Koloff has been with him almost constantly, teaching him and seconding him in his bouts, but he has decoited the camp of Sonnenberg and he may possibly work with Plestina.

The Bulgarian champion stated that he had been retained as Sonnenberg's trainer because the champion did not wish to wrestle him. "I can beat Sonnenberg," he said, "and if Plestina wants me, I'll help him train so that he can beat him."

The general impression is that Plestina can beat Sonny with very little help from anybody. The Pennsylvania Commission announced a few days ago that Sonnenberg had not met any serious challengers since he won the title from Lewis, although Joe Malcewicz and Stanley Stasiak, whom Sonnenberg whipped, are regarded as serious in any league.

Now along comes Plestina, the most feared wrestler in the world, and Gus proves himself a real champion by accepting his challenge. Plestina has been studiously side-stepped by the Zbyszkos, Stecher, Caddock, Lewis, and all the great wrestlers in the past 10 years. After they passed the peak and lost their titles, they allowed Plestina to meet them, but when a crown was involved, Plestina was barred.

The huge Plestina, who tossed Freddy Meyers, Sam Skorsky and Andy Brown in less than nine minutes last week, started training at Toland's gymnasium. Plestina, six feet four inches in height and 233 pounds in weight, is confident that he will overwhelm Sonnenberg with his tremendous strength. He handled Brown, Skorsky and Meyers like infants last Thursday night, and he expects to handle Sonnenberg just as easily.

McKenney Writes Rules for Gridiron

Although football is most distant from the thoughts of athletic fans at present, it is not the case with Joe McKenney, conference of a championship eleven at Boston College last fall.

Joe is just completing a set of instructive pamphlets which will be distributed to his returning players before the Heights close down for the summer next week.

For almost a month Joe has been gathering the material and assembling it in booklet form. He intends to have his athletes read the instructions and keep in touch with the game during the summer months so that they'll be thinking football but not football alone. Labor Day when the squad is called out.

Footballs will also be given to the backs and ends available for the 1929 team next week so that they'll keep in shape during vacation.

Kearns Says Canada Tracks Thriving

Belmont Park Frank Kearns back from the King's Park meeting, where he had a string of his stable, reports the newest of Canada's racing organizations as doing a thriving business. The park was all too tight and snug for the heavy attendance of Saturday. Evidently the good attendance for the Maryland and Kentucky meetings is to be in evidence over the Northern tracks. Surely racing appears to be in for a better year than last.

CONGRESSMAN FRISBY DEMANDS CENSORSHIP!

WASHINGTON—Congressman Frisby's nationwide investigation of Night Life is causing considerable comment among kodak enthusiasts. Mr. Frisby proposes censorship of all snapshots. Yesterday he moved to have the above picture inserted in the Congressional Record. It shows, he contends, how theatrical photographers take advantage of show girls to get publicity pictures. The girls, of course, hate to be photographed without their petticoats and do the best they can to avoid it. Frisby will, of course, demand protective legislation. His measure is called the Farm Daughters' Relief Bill.

LaBarba Favorite Over Chocolate

New York, May 22 (AP)—The boxing experts are expecting that Fidel LaBarba, retired undefeated flyweight champion, tonight will give Kid Chocolate, Cuba negro, his first defeat after a streak of 156 battles without a reverse. They will meet in the feature 10-round bout at the New York Coliseum with bantamweight championship recognition by the New York State Boxing Commission, possibly awaiting the winner.

Despite the dusky Cuban's impressive record, LaBarba has been a betting favorite for days. Odds are 6 to 5 with LaBarba on the long end.

NEW ENGLAND RAILROADS ARE HELPED

By FRANK H. MELOON
Financial Editor

New England railroads seem well favored by fortune this year. To begin with, they saved immense sums through the scantiness of the snowfalls. Then they won considerable awards through the mail contracts decision. And finally they benefit—no one knows just how much—by the O'Fallon decision.

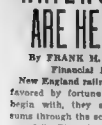
The New Haven, for example, might have been compelled to pay, if the decision had been adverse, about $500,000 as its 1928 indebtedness on account of "excess earnings" under the "recapture" liability law. I learned from Daniel Willard, president of the Baltimore & Ohio, astute Vermonter, a while ago, that the drafter of the "recapture clause" expected it to be repealed or amended when he drew it, up. It is unlikely the Supreme Court action was very generally anticipated.



Daniel Willard

The trend in new building is not sufficiently clear as yet to justify the extreme pessimism voiced in some quarters. Taking the metropolitan district of New York for study, we find new construction contracted for last week amounted to $25,702,500, an increase of $4,500,000 over the previous week, but nearly $4,000,000 under the figure a year ago. From January 1 through May 17 there was $460,068,000 worth of new building and engineering work started, a daily average of $4,006,700, against daily average of $5,158,500 for first five months of 1928. To date New England's new building figures have shown up better than those of other sections.

It is to be hoped that New England potato growers will be awakened to the pecuniary advantages of marketing their product in small packages, popularized by the chain stores, when the next crop has harvested. A big portion of the market in Massachusetts and other states was captured by mid-western growers in the past season.

Interesting in connection with discussion of the potato crop is the fact that Maine experiment stations are being turned into "beauty parlors" by Fred Griffee, state agriculture. The humble potato is having its "face lifted." The idea is to produce smooth-eyed Irish Cobblers, the baking potato par excellence, and Green Mountains that will resist skin-defacing diseases.

A smaller acreage is generally reported being devoted to potatoes this year. Financing the planting and harvesting of big New England potato farms was very profitable for some. Boston banking groups last year, and is being repeated on a larger scale, I am told, the screen test of planting 100 barrels of seed potatoes in New England in about $1800. The cost in Cuba, which is just taking up potato growing, is set at around $2350. A tariff protects the Cuban grower.

Bureau of Labor statistics on employment in the past have not been remarkably enlightening, because they have not been thorough. A new move that looks promising, though it would not be everywhere popular, has been tried out in Baltimore, where the police conducted a house-to-house canvass to get the facts.

Some of the rubber companies, forseeing the usual seasonal letdown in automotive demands, are expanding into other fields. President O'Neil of General Tire & Rubber Co., announces it is about to complete negotiations for purchase of a fleet of cabin monoplanes to be used on a nation-wide tour of the United States, Mexico, Cuba and Canada. With this fleet it is planned to demonstrate the practicability and superiority of heavier-than-air machines for commercial transportation purposes, not only in single units but also as a fleet operation.

Alexander Warden, who for the past two years has been New England representative of J. Lawrence & Co., has joined Pirnler, Simons & Co. to become manager of their New York office. Mr. Warden was one of the organizers of the Bond Club of Boston.

• • •

Officers of Gorham, Inc., were elected at the first meeting of directors held for purpose of organizing and laying plans for operation of this recently organized corporation formed for purpose of merging jewelry firms of Black, Starr & Frost, Spaulding & Co., of Chicago, and Fifth Avenue retail store of Gorham Manufacturing Co. In addition to election of officers, Col. A. M. Pope, president of the First National Corporation of Boston, was added to the board of directors.

Gamewell Dividend

Gamewell Co. declared a dividend of $1.25 a share, payable June 15. This is the same payment as was made three months ago.

BATTLE IN AIR IS STAGED BY BANKERS

By B. C. FORBES

NEW YORK, May 22—The greatest industrial corporation in America and the greatest financial organization in America have both become interested in aviation by buying into Pacific Coast companies. The West showed the East the way.

B. C. Forbes

First, National City Bank interests hooked up with Boeing, who made his mark in Seattle and in California, early developing the foremost commercial flying service in the country.

Now General Motors acquires virtual control of Fokker.

Present indications are that there will develop a Big Five in American aviation. The current is running very swiftly towards the absorption of isolated, independent companies.

Great significance attaches to General Motors acquisition of Fokker because it and Ford are the leading manufacturers of the tri-motors used in the largest ships capable of carrying many passengers. General Motors had already made its debut in aviation by taking hold of the Bendix Corporation. Doubtless, other concerns will be corralled by General Motors to build up and round out its aircraft facilities.

Charles E. Mitchell and his National City Bank associates acted quickly after making their initial association with W. E. Boeing. They reached out for several companies playing a leading part in various phases of the aircraft industry, including Pratt and Whitney—which, incidentally is headed by F. B. Rentschler, brother of Gordon S. Rentschler, president of the National City Bank. United Aircraft and Transport, organized to assimilate the various units, has recently figured very prominently in the stock market by doubling in price. High hopes are entertained of this influential group.

The C. M. Keys-Curtiss group, which has been developed by step over a relatively long period, is a conspicuous factor. The list of those associated with Curtiss and associated companies reads like half-a-dozen pages from Who's Who. The banking interests include Herbert Fleishhacker of San Francisco, Harris Stone & Co., Canal Bank & Trust Co. of New Orleans, National Shawmut Bank of Boston, National Park Bank of New York, Cassatt & Co., Blair & Co., Crocker National Bank of San Francisco, First Union Trust Co. of New York, State Street Trust Co. of Boston, Guardian Detroit Co., Equitable Trust Co. of New York, Girard Trust Co. of Philadelphia, Bank of America of New York, Continental Trust Co. of Chicago, Marine Trust Co. of Buffalo, People's Trust & Savings Bank of Chicago, First National Bank of St. Louis, First National Bank of Boston, Dillion, Read & Co. of New York.

The Aviation Corporation also has very strong financial backing.

Did you read the other day of the wonderful new Diesel aircraft engine produced by Packard Motor Co.? A flight of 650 miles was made at a fuel cost of only $4.68. This is but a foretaste of the strides bound to be made in making flying cheaper and safer.

What further would be made by buying aircraft stocks now if one could tell just which company is destined to come out on top? Usually it proves wise to pick the strongest.

Loft Shareholders Vote for Increase

Shareholders of Loft, Inc., approved proposal of directors to increase the authorized capital stock to 1,500,000 common from 650,000 shares. Over 65 per cent of the outstanding capital stock was represented at the meeting. Announcement of the offering of additional stock to stockholders will probably be made within the next two or three weeks.

Canada Foundation to Change Capital

Montreal, May 22—Directors of Foundation Co. of Canada propose to convert both classes of preferred and present common into two classes of common on basis of six shares of new common for each of old common. Special meeting of shareholders will be called today to act on the proposal. Shareholders will be asked to authorize an increase in common to 150,000 no-par shares.

Maine Central After Listing on Exchange

Following the lead of Boston & Maine common stockholders announced in the Boston Evening American Monday, it is stated more than 614 Maine Central stockholders have signed a card indicating they favor listing the common on the New York Stock Exchange. At the close of 1928, the road had 1830 common stockholders.

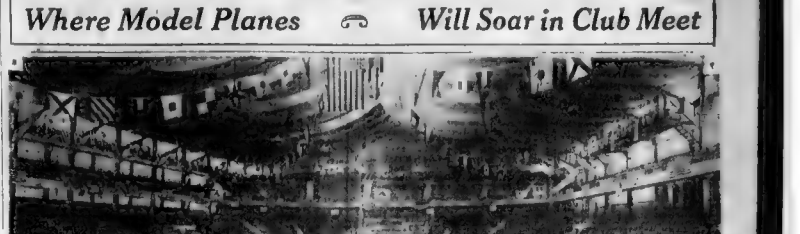
Where Model Planes Will Soar in Club Meet



Free use of the Boston Arena in St. Botolph st., near Massachusetts ave., one block from Symphony Hall, has been granted by the management for the model airplane meet on Saturday.

This is the only building in Boston in which Col. Charles A. Lindbergh spoke during the reception accorded him on July 22, 1927, two months after his epochal flight from New York to Paris.

This vast Arena is 278 feet long, 190 feet wide and 55 feet high. Its free use has been contributed through the courtesy of Manager George V. Brown, whose children are members of the Boston American Lindbergh Club.

CIRCUS LIFE INSPIRATION FOR SLOGAN WRITERS

Join the circus for a day. Travel with the big Selle-Floto shows and watch that army of men load and unload the animals and wagons. Eat in the circus cook tent with the performers. Mingle with the manager of the show, and best of all, have Tom Mix, the famous cowboy, as a pal.

This is the invitation the Boston American Lindbergh Club will extend to the boy who writes the best advertising slogan for Tom Mix and his pony, Tony.

Boys, here is an opportunity that never before has been offered to any youngster. It is just one of those surprises which the Boston American Lindbergh Club plans for its members.

Now the "trip for a day with a circus" is not all. The Boston American Lindbergh Club has arranged with Selle-Floto Circus to provide 500 free tickets for members of the club. These tickets will be distributed as follows: The boys and girls who write the first 25 best slogans will receive four tickets each, the next 25 boys and girls will receive two tickets each, and the next 100 boys and girls will receive one ticket each.

When the Selle-Floto Circus closes its week's engagement in Boston it will travel a circuit of New England cities, including Providence, Pawtucket, Newport, New Bedford, Fall River, Attleboro, Brockton, Lowell, Malden, Lynn, Salem, Gloucester, Portland, Me., Newburyport, Portsmouth, Concord, Manchester, Pittsburg, Framingham, New London, New Britain, Stamford, Willimantic and several others.

The members of the club who live in these cities will have a chance to see the circus free, if they just join our "slogan writing party" and have some fun. The five boys and girls in each of the above cities who write the best slogan among the members in their own city will be given free tickets each.

Tom will join Selle-Floto Circus in Boston Monday, and the circus in its advertising now is using the slogan: "Loved by every child, admired by every man, adored by every woman."

Children, can you write a better slogan. If you can, do it now and win free tickets to Selle-Floto Circus. The closing time for sending in your slogans is soon. Monday May 27. Send your slogans to Slogan Editor—Lindbergh Club, American—8 Winthrop sq, Boston, Mass.

The task of selecting the best estimates of the maximum attendance made in the flight by Russell N. Boardman over Boston Common last Saturday afternoon is about completed. We hope to announce the names of the winners of the 29 cash awards in Thursday's Boston Evening American.

Just another mention about those tickets which the Boston Evening American Lindbergh Club sent you for the new B. F. Keith Theater in Boston. Remember, beginning Saturday, May 25, these tickets will be good only at the Keith-Albee Theater in Washington st. This change was made when the new B. F. Keith Theater discontinued its motion pictures and decided to play all high class vaudeville acts. So on next Saturday morning and every day thereafter go to the Keith-Albee Theater with your tickets. Be sure to have your membership card and button with you.

Everything is set for that big event at the Boston Arena next Saturday morning. What member of the Boston Evening American Lindbergh Club is going to win that "Lone Eagle" Buick or Essex watch? This watch, which retails at $50, will be given to the boy or girl whose plane remain in the air the longest. It was contributed as a prize by the Washington Jewelry Co. of 255 Washington st, Boston. There will be other prizes for various events and different types of planes. But the watch will be a free-for-all event.

Midnight tonight is the closing time for sending in your essay on "What Lindy Means to Me." Now boys and girls if your essay hasn't a postmark later than midnight it will not be considered for that trip to Washington.

The judges will begin work Thursday in sorting out the essays and beginning the process of elimination in an effort to select the first 12 best essays and the 13th best essay written by a girl. Then the next 203 best essays. The first 12 boys and girls will win a five day trip to Washington. The girl will be given a trip to New York city as guest of the Public Theaters of Boston. The next 200 children will be given a free show at Loew's Orpheum Theater in Washington st. some Saturday morning next month. Now, boys and girls, watch the Boston Evening American for announcement of the winners of the trips to Washington and New York.

The judges in the search among the boys of the Boston American Lindbergh Club for a "double" of Frankie Darro, the juvenile motion picture star playing in "The Racing Dow Man," are still busy going through the mass of pictures of our club members received to complete their task this week. The names and picture of the winner will be published in the Boston Evening American as soon as he is selected.

Presbyterians Vote for Union

Montreal, N. C., May 22 (AP)—Union with the United Presbyterian Church in North America having been approved, the general assembly of the Presbyterian Church in the United States today turned to consideration of closer relations with other Presbyterian bodies.

Union with the United Presbyterians received the stamp of approval of the assembly, but must be passed upon by the presbyteries individually before the position of the church is determined. The union would mean a church with an approximate membership of 625,300

John Cifrino to Be Honored at Dinner

Several hundred of the most prominent citizens in the Italo-American colony of this city will attend the testimonial dinner banquet to be tendered John Cifrino, at the Copley-Plaza Hotel tomorrow night.

Mr. Cifrino recently returned from a trip abroad, visiting the scenes of his early boyhood in Italy, after an absence of more than 20 years.

Merchants Limited to Run in Sections

Difficulty heretofore experienced in obtaining transportation on the crack Merchants Limited express to New York has induced officials of the New Haven Railroad to change its ticket selling policy.

In future, space will be provided by running the train in more than one section wherever the demand warrants. The new system was recently inaugurated and the reduction watched in ticket offices in Boston and Providence. Public approval was so spontaneous that the plan will remain effective.

FLAG HONORS TO CAMBRIDGE SCHOOLGIRL

A 14-year-old Watertown miss, who is a pupil at St. John's high school in Cambridge, discovered one day that she had only 24 hours to enter the first annual Flag Contest of the United States Flag Association by enrolling in the Flag Unit of the Cambridge Post No. 27, American Legion, of Cambridge.

Displayed in the corridor of St. John's high school was a "flier" upon which was printed 75 official questions that contestants were required to answer as part of the Flag Contest. Unable to obtain, owing to the shortness of time, a list from her unit, she obtained permission to take the "flier."

At her home that evening she answered the 75 questions and also submitted the required accompanying essay on the following day. Two weeks later at the public exercises held by the Cambridge Post No. 27, American Legion, in Sanders Theatre, Harvard College, she was awarded the Old Glory Medal" and the title of "Girl of the Flag." Champion of that unit. Today, this girl has been awarded the title of "Regional Girl Flag Champion" in the Regional Flag Contest.

The girl is Miss Rosanne Catherine Higgins, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Patrick Higgins, of No. 18 Gilkey ct., Watertown. Miss Higgins was awarded the highest mark by the Regional Jury of Award, which examined hundreds of essays submitted by the girl contestants throughout the New England states.

Miss Higgins mother and father were born in Ireland. She has a sister, Marion, and two brothers, Edmund and James. She is the youngest of four children.

The Cambridge Post No. 27, American Legion, of Cambridge, which conducted the contest, under the guidance of Dr. Walter Cronin, commander and J. Harry McCaffrey, had 145 contestants.

Miss Higgins will receive, as one of the fine awards offered in the contest, a scholarship valued at $200 to be used by her as she sees fit. She will represent the New England Region in the Flag Contest at the National (final) Contest, which will be held in Washington, D. C., the evening of the Flag Day, Friday, June 14.

She will receive the "Cross of Honor" of the United States Flag Association, the decoration which Col. Charles A. Lindbergh was the first man to receive. This decoration invests the girl with the title of "Girl of the Flag." The "Cross of Honor" will be presented to Miss Higgins by President Hoover, or some other distinguished person, either at the White House or some other suitable place.

The winner will also be taken on a two weeks' pilgrimage to America's most inspiring patriotic shrines.

Dr. Bisch's Daily Health Hint

ONE'S health may be affected by overdoing exercise as well as by not exercising sufficiently. In the former case fatigue substances are formed which are not eliminated properly because of the fact they accumulate much too fast.

Spring Salad Hints

WHOLE crisp lettuce is, of course, the foundation of every perfect salad. The leaves should be washed under cold running water, dried carefully and put in a container (such as a tightly - covered tin can) near the ice for a short time before serving.

Martha Lee

Ingredients that discolor quickly, such as pears, apples or bananas, should have a little lemon juice poured over them to freshen them until eaten. If ingredients are to be diced or chopped, use a sharp knife and then toss them lightly together with a wooden spoon and fork, so that they will not look mushy.

All meats, fish and vegetable salads are improved by letting the ingredients stand for an hour or more in a dressing of 2 tbsps. of oil, 1 tbsp. of lemon juice or vinegar, and a seasoning of pepper and salt. This is kept on ice for an hour, the ingredients being tossed lightly now and then to become coated all over. Any surplus dressing is poured off before the final dressing with mayonnaise.

Salads really should be made chiefly out of imagination and left overs. It is not necessary to buy a large number of expensive ingredients to prepare a luscious salad.

Look over the contents of the ice box carefully and, if the remnants are combined with intelligence and arranged with a careful hand, no one will suspect that they are eating up the scraps.

For instance, if you happen to have a cup of ham and a few stalks of celery, dice both in neat bits and mix with 1 green pepper chopped. Toss lightly together and serve with mayonnaise or a tomato dressing made by adding 1 tbsp. of chili sauce or catsup and ¼ tsp. of salt to 1 cup of mayonnaise.

A new chicken combination calls for ½ cup of diced chicken, 1 cup of diced celery, ½ cup of canned or fresh pineapple, 2 cups of mayonnaise, 8 ripe or green olives and crisp lettuce.

For fish and pepper salads, scoop the seeds from the peppers and chill the pepper cases in cold salt water for 30 minutes. Moisten cold cooked and flaked fish with mayonnaise, drain and dry the pepper shells and fill with the fish mixture. This is nice served with a dressing made by adding 1 hard cooked chopped egg yolk, 1 tsp. of vinegar and 1 tsp. of chili sauce to 1 cup of mayonnaise.

Another delicious fish salad is made with 1 cup of cold fish flaked, 1 cup of diced apple, 1 tbsp. of onion or chives, chopped fine and added to 1 cup of mayonnaise.

Endless are the gelatine salads which are so good in hot weather. A favorite recipe asks for ½ pkg. of lemon gelatine powder, 1 cup of boiling hot chicken broth (canned if desired), 1 cup of diced chicken, 1 cup of celery, 1 chopped pimento, 1 tbsp. vinegar, ½ tsp. salt, a dash of cayenne, ½ cup heavy whipped cream, water cress or lettuce stuffed olives and 1 cup of mayonnaise.

First the lemon gelatine powder is dissolved in the boiling broth and chilled. When cold and slightly thickened it is beaten with a rotary egg beater until like whipped cream. This can be done most successfully if the container is put in a bowl of ice.

Next the chicken, celery, pimento, vinegar, salt and pepper is mixed together and folded into the whipped gelatine. Next the whipped cream is added and the whole mixture is turned into a mold rinsed in cold water. This is chilled and served on lettuce or water cress garnished with stuffed olives and the mayonnaise.

A sardine salad that is "different" is made by placing 2 sardines on lettuce on each individual salad plate and between them putting mounds of hard cooked diced eggs and spiced sliced very thin.

One tbsp. of lemon juice is mixed with ½ tsp. tabasco or Worcestershire sauce and added to 1¼ cups of mayonnaise. This dressing is served with the salad.

A luscious crab salad calls for 1 pint of crab meat cooked and flaked, salt and pepper to taste, moistened with mayonnaise and served on lettuce garnished with hard cooked egg slices, sliced beets and celery.

Tuna fish combined with asparagus is rather new, too. Moisten 1 cup of tuna fish with 1 cup of mayonnaise to which 1 tbsp of chives or onions has been added. Serve on crisp lettuce with 18 asparagus tips arranged on one side and 3 hard-cooked eggs cut on the other. A tomato dressing is nice poured over this.

Next week I shall have some new vegetable and fruit salads for you.

Until them, adios.

MARTHA LEE.

The Scheming Friend -:- -:-

DRAWN BY Dorothy Flack

SOME people's idea of friendship is like an elastic band. They stretch it over such a wide area that it's hard to know just where it ends. Sometimes this is wise, and sometimes it is tragedy.

Take, for instance, two girls who have been chums through life. They've shared secrets and scoldings; the same schools and colleges have been honored, or otherwise, with their presence, but when it comes to a man—then friendship ceases. Some girls there are who think that everyone who comes within their ken is fair game. And so when they see Little Pal with a sweetheart they immediately set about trying to take him away. Sometimes they succeed, but sometimes they only succeed in losing both the man and the girl friend. For men can see through these ruses. At first they are flattered, and maybe do stray away from Little Pal's side, only to become disgusted and humbly come back to her.

So watch out! Do to your girl friend as you would want her to do to you if the tables were turned! How would you feel to have your sweetheart snatched from under your eyes? You'd be the first to rail and rant and weep about it, wouldn't you?

Honesty is best and fairness and playing the game square—and in this way alone you will eventually find your own Love and happiness!

The Domestic Girl -:- By Beatrice Fairfax

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX
An Authority on Problems of Love and Marriage

IS the domestic girl a popular modern type?

Are modern young men looking for a helpmate who possesses old-fashioned virtues and accomplishments? Is home-made cooking still the way to a man's heart?

These reflections are apropos a short, unassuming letter which I printed in this column some time ago, signed, "Thank You."

"Dear Miss Fairfax," the letter read, "I am twenty-three years old. I have no parents. I keep house. I love to cook. I don't dance and don't care for good times. The only place I go to is the movies. I am alone a great deal.

"Please tell me how I can interest some young man who will respect and care for me."

Nothing could be more unassuming, retiring and old-fashioned than this little note from a domestic girl. As soon as it was printed letters began to pour in from young men eager to meet the writer.

Not one or two, but several hundred young men assured me that "Thank You," writer of the note I have just reprinted, is exactly the kind of girl they long to find. They begged for an introduction.

While I like nothing better than encouraging congenial friendships, yet, of course, I cannot take the responsibility of introducing young folks who are unknown to me and utter strangers to each other. For such unassuming might prove anything but congenial and beneficial to all concerned.

For that reason, I have been unable to bring about any introductions to unassuming, quiet Miss Thank You, who loves to cook, loves to keep house, is happy and content if she can go to the movies and would like to meet a young man who would respect and care for her.

The correspondence on the subject tends to prove, however, that modern young men wish a home-loving girl for sweetheart and wife, just as their fathers did before them.

Ask nine out of 10 young men whether they wish a wife who can cook and keep house expertly, one who loves home and children, and they will answer yes without hesitation.

True, many modern young men marry a type of girl who is anything but domestic.

But the reason is plain. They become fascinated with a girl who is not domestic but attractive, before discovering the charming domestic girl.

Here is a hint for thousands of girls who write me, asking how to win The Man, or how to interest young men in general: It is not enough to have splendid character, although every worth-while man wants his wife to be of highest character. It is not enough to be intelligent. Intelligence without charms will frighten away any man. Even the lovely domestic charms and accomplishments that make a girl a successful homemaker are not enough to win and hold a man's love. In addition to these requisites you must possess companionable charm, if you hope to be sought out by a man you can love and who will love, respect and care for you.

I can think of several girls of my acquaintance who are home-loving, sweet, domestic, well-suited to successful marriage, but they receive little masculine attention. Why?

Men pass these girls by without noticing them because they neglect to make a good appearance. Inevitably we are judged first by our looks. Only an utterly charming girl can overcome the handicap of unprepossessing personal appearance.

Anne, for instance, is a bit run down at the heels, her stocking seams are crooked, her hair is without lustre, her teeth are lacking in fresh white cleanliness. Beauty is too interested in books to dress smartly. Both girls are awkward and ill-at-ease because they have not cultivated the art of being interesting and entertaining.

Doubtless you noticed that all the leading candidates for "typical American girl" in the contest recently conducted by a leading magazine were not only capable, but smart and dainty and as pretty as they were efficient. Nearly every one of them numbered cooking among her accomplishments. Those girls, because of their poise and capacity for adjustment, would be equally natural, unassuming and content at a neighborhood movie and in a parterre box at the opera, with The Right Young Man.

When you go picnicking with that nice young man this spring, you may be sure he will not think less of you because you make the delicious hot coffee you serve and the salad, cake and sandwiches are products of your own skill at cookery. But remember, still more important in his eyes will be your companionable, attractive charm and affectionate thoughtfulness—for these are the qualities that make you a loved sweetheart as well as a clever domestic girl!

Question of Height

By MARIA JERITZA.

FEW women are satisfied with themselves "as is." Perhaps this is well, for if we were all blissfully contented with ourselves, faults, defects, prejudices and all, there would be no incentive to progress, and what a boring old world this would be!

No one can accuse modern women, however, of being lazily satisfied with themselves. This is an era of idealism. With every succeeding horizons we press forward toward the high mark of perfect beauty, grace and charm we are for ourselves. And how glorious are the results!

There are, however, some physical characteristics that cannot be changed, and it is foolish to waste time bewailing this fact. Short women frequently write me, asking how they can grow tall, while tall women seem equally unhappy because of their superfluous inches of height.

It is said that once a violet strove to be a rose, and the result was an orchid. But how much better than this transformation would be the changing of a full-grown woman from tall to short or short to tall! Do not struggle to change your type, but work with nature to perfect it's beauty and appeal.

The under-sized girl of 15 or 16 may, it is true, add an inch or two to her height by plenty of exercise in the open air, a nourishing diet, including vegetables, meat and a quart of milk each day with the cream left in, and last but not least, daily practice of stretching exercises.

Lie down on the floor, flat on your back, and stretch your arms as far as you can on the floor above your head. Then give an extra stretch. Repeat this movement 10 times.

Next rise on your tiptoes and try to stretch yourself to the greatest possible height. Stretch your neck, and your arms, reaching like a goose does, as though to make it longer. These and similar exercises, even though they may not actually make you taller, will add to your seeming height by lending grace and erectness to your carriage and posture. For the same reason, they are valuable exercises for a tall woman—they will make her more queenly.

A tall woman who goes about with hunched shoulders and an apologetic air because she is tall is a far-from-lovely sight. But if you are tall and carry yourself well and dress becomingly, keeping your complexion and hair at their best, you may be described as "divinely tall and most divinely fair."

Be true to your type. Personally, I would not deduct one inch from my height, which is above the average. For if I did, I would not be Jeritza!

The short woman should dress with the simplicity of a child, keeping to moderate and small hats, discarding fussy ornament. She will look her prettiest in plain frocks, just as a little girl does. And if she watches her calories, and keeps slender, she should still look youthful long after she reaches middle age.

A tall woman should avoid vertical stripes, large plaids, high heels and straight lines which emphasize her tallness.

Remember, it is not your height or lack of height, but your proportion and symmetry that count.

Three-Minute Trips

By TEMPLE MANNING

AMONG the strange Polynesian people who inhabit Madagascar, a great island lying about 250 miles off the southeast coast of Africa, superstition rules supreme.

The Malagasy religion is largely a cult of ancestors. True, they have supreme god, Zanahary, creator of all things, but he is remote from the affairs of men and regarded as incapable of doing evil. Hence worship of him is considered superfluous.

An essential part of their religion is fady, which corresponds roughly to what is known in Polynesia as taboo. It covers an immense range.

There is fady attaching to the abnormal, to the new and the fresh, to sick and dead, to chiefs, clans and castes, to men and to women, to the unborn infant and to members of a family in their relations with each other, to places, times, seasons, cardinal points, to planets and to animals.

In one tribe no one may drink at a spring without planting in the ground a knotted piece of straw to propitiate the Vazimba, who are deemed to be protectors of springs, tombs and rivers. Among some it is fady to call by name anyone on the way to draw water, for that person will surely die.

In various parts of the island it is fady to eat standing up or lying down, or with the hat on the head, the big rice spoon must not be placed crossways on the pot, neither must anyone be struck with it; food must not be thrown from one to another; the lambo (cloth) must not cover the hands at a meal; marrow may not be extracted from a bone, and so on.

Fady has its place, too, in mourning rites, as well as at planting time, at the birth of a child, at death—throughout life, in fact. Visitors to Madagascar should find many amusing and curious customs to intrigue them, but hardly enough to offset the primitive hardships unless the interest is more than that of a casual tourist.

SMART SAYINGS OF CLEVER CHILDREN

Once I asked my neighbor's little boy, aged four, "If a lion came near to eat you up would you scream?"

"No, sir," was his answer.

"Why not?" I asked.

"Because my papa says children should never talk at meal times."

FADS AND FASHIONS

Increasingly emphatic is the vogue for printed fabrics for evening wear. One frock of figured taffeta, seen gone so far as to have an overskirt of chiffon in which the exact color and design are repeated.

Gird your gloves with diamonds if you are looking for something to do with your money. An expensive fad is the diamond buckle to fasten the glove. Equally attractive, and nearer the purse strings are buckles of platinum, gold, silver and enamel.

One would need the pot of gold at the end of the rainbow to obtain a rainbow necklace of pearls. The white pearls blended with pink, black, green, rose, honey and blue colored pearls give a soft and fascinating multi-colored light, with true rainbow effect.

AUCTION BRIDGE

by WILBUR C. WHITEHEAD

DIFFERENCE IN BIDDING

Auction Bidding—South, West, and North passing, East bids one Diamond, and West, with support in the Diamond suit, but with two other suits stopped, takes out with one No Trump, securing the contract.

Contract Bidding: East opens the bidding with one Daimond and West takes out with two Clubs, following which East makes the game bid of three No Trumps.

Salient Points of Contract Bidding: East's introductory Diamond bid, instead of a No Trump, was in line with the present-day practice of avoiding immediate No Trump bids if possible, when the hand does not contain at least three cards or two to the Ace or King (A x or K x) in support of any suit take-out by partner. West's two Club take-out, instead of a two Diamond assist, is to show both high and long-card supporting strength for a No Trump bid by East should Clubs happen to be East's weak suit.

The Play: South leads the Spade 6. East, reading the 6 as South's fourth best card of suit and employing the Rule of Eleven, sees that the Spade 9 is Dummy's third card of suit and this places him in the desired position to start without delay the establishment of his Diamond suit. Finding the Diamond King in North's hand, East can count 5 positive tricks as Five Diamonds, three Spades, one Heart and one Club, or ten in all. Any additional trick or tricks that East may make must depend upon poor discarding by the adversaries, as the outstanding high cards in Spades are so located as to preclude the possibility of a successful finesse.

Hospital for Criminal

By LOUIS E. BISCH, M.D., Ph. D., Famous Authority on Health and Psychology.

IF a statement that hospitals should house criminals had been made fifty years ago it surely would have been derided as something utterly fantastical and impractical as well as absurd.

But nowadays we have advanced a great deal in our study of crime, criminals and criminal motives.

We know now that many if not most criminals are sick.

And do not sick persons belong in hospitals?

A modern hospital is associated so inseparably in one's mind with kindness and the best of advice and treatment that many people at once become antagonistic to any suggestion that criminals be confined there.

Prisons, they say, are already altogether too comfortable.

Too many privileges are given to those who break the laws and who injure our property and lives in jeopardy.

Criminals must be punished. They must be treated ruthlessly.

All of which sounds very plausible—on the surface at least.

But let us examine a little deeper into the subject.

Statistics show that a large proportion of those committing repeated criminal acts are diseased either in body or in mind, or both to a certain per cent of all chronic offenders are insane.

A certain proportion of all lawbreakers are actually feeble-mindedly—that is, actually feeble-minded.

A certain number—and it is very large—of all persons in our jails and prisons belong to the class of abnormal individuals known as psychopaths.

A certain, not inconsiderable, number are chronically addicted to alcohol and habit-forming drugs such as cocaine, morphine and heroin.

Many criminals also suffer incurable diseases of the brain and nervous systems.

Now, then, should such persons rightly be classed as sick or not?

We are not acting in too sympathetic a manner if we advocate hospitals for criminals. We are not encouraging crime when we do that.

What we are doing is acting in harmony with sane, sound, scientific fact.

What we do now is arrest, convict, incarcerate and then free thousands of insane persons who sooner or later are bound to drift back into the clutches of the law.

What we should do is build special hospitals for our incurable criminals, arrest them once, and then keep them there.

Some day society will wake up to the foolish, wasteful and expensive policy it now conducts in regard to criminals.

It will have learned to put away for good and all those who can never be normal.

One cannot deny the fact that some criminals are normal. That is, according to our modern tests and methods of mental examinations, they come through without revealing any special defect or disease of mind.

Society must protect itself against such persons of course. And prison may be the best place, although scarcely prisons as most are conducted nowadays.

Hospitals, however, is not for the normal criminal. It is for the mentally sick criminal. It is the mentally sick criminal that demands more understanding and enlightened care.

Special institutions should be built for such individuals—sort of prison hospitals or, if you will, hospital prisons.

Here they would be scientifically studied and, if possible, treated.

In such way society would deal with the criminal problem in a rational way and the amount of crime would be cut most markedly.

HIDDEN FIRES

by Aileen de Vilbiss

Story of Love and Mystery in Gay Honolulu

CHAPTER 9

DON CARLOS was nonplussed. He looked behind him. No; there was no other guest upon the lania.

He gazed at the woman more keenly.

And then he knew that fate was being kind to him.

Framed in the doorway stood the woman whom he had met on the stairs of the building down in Silver st.

She repeated her command in a low voice. Trembling despite himself Don Carlos drew out the sheet of paper upon which was written in a sprawling hand the following:

"I overheard the conversation. What thin and tepid blood must flow in veins of you who say that lamour's gone from all these fair ar islands of the seas because the southern Cross.

"If you would be told of romance come to me on Wednesday night. Your soul shall find its cup of beauty full.

"Midnight of Wednesday.

"The cerebral anus mond.

"EUGENIE NAHULI."

Nahuli! Could it be——

Would he go? Shades of immortal romance!

Wise mother, she—who named her son Don Carlos. . . .

Back in San Francisco Eve Whiting lay wide-eyed and sleepless, imagining tall, black-eyed Don Carlos whirling some island beauty in his arms to the strains of a haunting steel guitar. And such jealousy consumed her body as she never dreamed could exist.

She would have her day! And then, the score he would have to settle.

One of the little imps of destiny laughed at the irony of it all.

Eve Whiting had attained her wish. She was over in the old admist its bright lights. Surrounded by a little group of satellites and Jimmie Barron's delightful voice come percolating over the wires.

Lunch together on Saturday!

Oh, marvellous!

But surely, surely there would be a 'phone call long before the end of the week!

It was now Thursday . . . Two whole days since their meeting on Long Island and again in Connecticut . . . and he had not, to date, communicated with her . . .

On the evening following Kitty's day of tension at the office Miss Vina Byrne, arrayed in an orchid negligee that had been imported from Paris, and which she considered was extremely fetching—reclined on a "chaise longue" in the livingroom of her Long Island summer home and cast appraising eyes on Jimmie Barron.

She was in a mood for romance. To that end—and because she had a queer feeling about his absurd termination of their dinner at the roadhouse a couple of nights ago —Vina was almost certain she'd seen him speaking to a girl out in the garden, although the light out there was dimness, she'd been watching from the brightly lit interior of the hotel and couldn't be quite sure—but that was why Jimmie!)—she had tonight summoned him to her side, in her own imperious way, and was determined to get to the bottom of the affair.

She leaned towards him suddenly, whispered theatrically:

"You do care for me don't you, Jimmie?"

He cleared his throat. "Of course I—I'm fond of you, Vina." She saw he was protesting. Saw the embarrassment in his fine eyes.

He moved uneasily.

"Why do you ask?"

What Has Happened So Far

Don Carlos Whiting goes to Hawaii after he discovers that his wife, Eve, is carrying on an affair with George Phillips, a neighbor. On the island a native, David Nahuli, offers him $2000 for delivering a black bag. He sees Eugenie, Nahuli's wife, who fascinates him. Phillips carries on his suit for Eve's love, but quarreling brings unhappiness. Don Carlos meets Selma Wilson, crippled mother of an unusual family, which includes a daughter, Ruth. The latter plans a companionate marriage with Al Harding, much to the disgust of her father, Big Tim Wilson. A mysterious letter is dropped at Don Carlos' feet and a woman motions for him to read it.

(Now Go On With the Story)

She laughed mirthlessly as she visioned her irate husband when she descended upon him.

Once again Life stepped in to mar the intricate pattern of Don Carlos' life.

Hot, humid days passed. Interminable days, it seemed, to Don Carlos.

Wednesday was but five days away, yet those five days were mocking by an eternity for the man who waited their passing.

Nature attempted to white the time away by staging one of her magnificent Kona storms. For three days she rocked the earth as though it were a phantom, willy-nilly blowing. And then came the summons to Don Carlos.

He had been walking over to the main hotel, where the tables were placed upon the lanai, for one ate outdoors the year around in this warm spot, when he had been accosted by someone in the path before him.

"Don Carlos Whiting!"

Darkness was settling upon the island, and he had been unable to recognize the voice.

"Yes? What is it?"

"We have need of you."

"Who—who are you?"

"David Nahuli would have a few words with you."

"Nahuli!"

That name fraught with mystery.

"What are you? David Nahuli?"

"That is for time to tell. Shall we say, an individual who, like yourself, is seeking adventure?"

"Why have you come into my life again? It has been weeks since first we met."

"It is desired that once again you carry a little black bag. And the reward will be the same."

"Look here, Nahuli. There's something damn mysterious about this whole business. If it's something against the law, I don't want to be mixed up in it. That line of talk of yours about this trip only containing important papers won't hold water."

"The question of your finances is thus solved itself. Yes? You are no longer in need of funds? Is that the reason for your manner, Don Carlos Whiting?"

"Hell, no. We always need money, don't we? But I've still got a good bit of that left. It isn't that—it's just——"

"Just what, my friend? I thought you were seeking romance and adventure with which to fire your imagination in order that you might be successful as an artist—of words. Is that not so, my friend?"

Damn the fellow! Those soft tones of his would hypnotize the minds of older men than Don Carlos. The Polynesian should have been an orator—he could have swayed his audience.

"Yes, of course. I'm always looking for new plots."

"And I am here to help you find them, my friend. Tonight, out at Makenui Point, romance and adventure calls to you. In the darkness will come the age-old lure of the unknown. Are you a coward, Don Carlos Whiting, thus to pass by an opportunity for adventure which may never come to you again? What if the odds are great? Is not the reward greater?"

"Do you promise me that this—this thing you want me to do—is not outside the law? That it is only a matter of say, political interest? As you intimated, the first time?"

"I promise, Don Carlos Whiting." The Polynesian's voice was but a breath of sound on the warm, tropical night.

How was he to know that it is easier for some to lie than to tell the truth?

"Very well. What it is you want me to do?"

"Outside the entrance to Punahou College at the hour of 10 tonight will stand a green touring car. The password, for the chauffeur is 'mahini' (stranger). He will take you to a quiet spot on Magnuru Point, and there, when you see three red rockets flash into the air you will deliver this package to the man who comes forward to greet you. No words will be necessary. He will at once give you the sum of money I have indicated. That is all, my friend. It is easy, is it not?"

"And sounds most interesting. I'll be there."

David Nahuli fled into the shadows of the hibiscus hedge which skirted the grounds as silently as he had come.

Don Carlos passed into the dining room, seated himself at his accustomed place and was lost in thought.

The intriguing pattern of life was held up to his avid eyes—these tropical sea nights.

Man Madness

A SIX-DAY STORY

ma's face that startled Kitty.

Irma proceeded: "Why on earth dn't you let on that you knew en, when I pointed him out? hat on earth was all the secrecy bout?"

"There was no secrecy." Kitty id determined she would cease ing so naive and open.

"It's nothing to me one way or other. Only Jimmie Barron's pposed to be engaged, you know and that sharp-faced blonde don't look the sort to tolerate her st young man gallivanting all er the country at midnight in e moonlight with another girl."

Miss Vina Byrne—framed by a al of roses and honeysuckle that r around the living-room window of her parents' Summer me upon Long Island — looked e a blonde sun-maiden, or one those gay posters that adorn the advertising boardings everyere.

Vina was pretty. A cool, practical and ambitious girl.

Her father was mowing the wn. She called to him!

"Come on in. I want to talk to u."

"You come out here. I haven't aned up this job yet.

"You certain display of energy, old thing. You don't want to ve a stroke do you? And what with the strong sun and your high blood pressure, something'll snap, you're not careful," she chided the old man.

He murmured: "We can only fend the gardener twice a week."

She caught him by the arm and dragged him, willy-nilly, to a rustic summerhouse that overlooked the sea.

He said now, testily: "If you dragged me here to pester me about that Italian singing fellow I tell you straight I don't know I'm going to raise the cash."

"My heart's simply set on going to Italy. My singing teacher in New York says it'll be the making of my career."

"Look here, girl, why don't you drop this high-falutin nonsense stuff about being a singer, and settle down to a decent, sensible life with a man? What's this young Jimmie Barron whom you supposed to be engaged to? Why don't he say to all this highbrow Italian stuff?"

"Jimmie's a sweet pea, and some day or other I'm perfectly willing to marry him — but my career comes first!"

Kitty Grayson was extraordinarily restless. Each hour of her day in the office indeed every minute — she was expecting the telephone to ring especially for her and Jimmie Barron's delightful voice come percolating over the wires.

Lunch together on Saturday!

Oh, marvellous!

But surely, surely there would be a 'phone call long before the end of the week!

It was now Thursday . . . Two whole days since their meeting on Long Island and again in Connecticut . . . and he had not, to date, communicated with her . . .

On the evening following Kitty's day of tension at the office Miss Vina Byrne, arrayed in an orchid negligee that had been imported from Paris, and which she considered was extremely fetching—reclined on a "chaise longue" in the livingroom of her Long Island summer home and cast appraising eyes on Jimmie Barron.

She was in a mood for romance. To that end—and because she had a queer feeling about his absurd termination of their dinner at the roadhouse a couple of nights ago —Vina was almost certain she'd seen him speaking to a girl out in the garden, although the light out there was dimness, she'd been watching from the brightly lit interior of the hotel and couldn't be quite sure—but that was why (Jimmie!)—she had tonight summoned him to her side, in her own imperious way, and was determined to get to the bottom of the affair.

She leaned towards him suddenly, whispered theatrically:

"You do care for me don't you, Jimmie?"

He cleared his throat. "Of course I—I'm fond of you, Vina." She saw he was protesting. Saw the embarrassment in his fine eyes.

He moved uneasily.

"Why do you ask?"

"You do care for me a whole heap, don't you, Jimmie?"

"I—why, Vina—of course I like you—a lot."

"But you don't act as if you do! You're pouting again, childishly. "Besides, what's—liking? I thought —you made me feel—you were in love with me . . ."

Embarrassedly he wondered had he really done that?

He withdrew his arm, gently, from her neck—where she had placed it—and rose to his feet.

She got up, too. She came close, to him.

"Aren't we—engaged?" Her voice seemed pathetic.

"Don't let's be melodramatic, Vina. You know that you and I are very old and close friends, and I hope we always shall be. But I've wondered about our . . . our ever marrying . . ."

You see . . . he hurried on as he saw her red lips part as though she'd interrupt him—"I've really danced little to offer a brilliant girl like yourself. It may be years and years before I've anything worth while, and at the same time, you've got your musical career to think about. You've studied hard, Vina, and I'm rather—well— foolish—I mean—," he floundered, "unfair to yourself" to tie up my future like that. It's what's bound to be a long engagement? See?"

Vina's lips set in a thin, hard line.

"I don't see anything . . . except that you're pouring me."

And at that she did a clever thing. She forced tears into the Persian blue eyes that looked oh! so pathetic. She whispered brokenly:—

"I thought—there was—between you and me—oh yes, there was!—a sort of an 'understanding'?"

So Vina cared for him! In his friendly, heedless, selfish fashion all these years he'd made her care, he told himself, in bitter condemnation.

He couldn't back out now!

"Of course—there is, Vina," he said thrustily, "of course . . ."

Her golden head rested close against his shoulder.

Kitty rode home in the subway with a sore heart. She had counted so on Jimmy Barron telephoning! But no call had come from him that day . . .

Vina was satisfied. She was a girl who had a tremendous belief in her own abilities to cope with any situation.

And now she had definitely confirmed the "understanding" existing between herself and handsome Jimmie Barron.

On this delightful Summer evening—it was a Thursday — when Kitty Grayson, waiting for a phone call from Jimmy, was trying in vain to work her chagrin off by pruning the roses in her garden and chatting with her mother the latter remarked how much herself was sitting with Vina in her Long Island Summer home, and calling up to say that it was though the web were tightening about him.

He tried not to think of Kitty. He knew ever and anon would rise the image of the pale, pretty face.

So sweet was she! So young! So eager! The gracious and wistful beauty of her!

He didn't WANT to call off his appointment. He wanted to see Kitty! Why shouldn't he see her? What harm would it do anyone to have some pleasure both in himself and her? He certainly wasn't going to let Vina think she owned him, body and soul!

"By the way, don't forget your appointment with me on Saturday," she was saying, now.

He looked at her vaguely, wrinkled his forehead, repeated: "Saturday?"

"Yes." Her heel, in its smart slipper, tapped briskly on the parquet floor of the living-room. "Mrs. Timpkins' fete at Greenwich. For the benefit of the hospitals.

"Oh, a sort of charity gardenparty? I could look in around five?"

"You could do nothing of the sort. You're booked to be my escort.

He moved uneasily. He said: "I can't. I've a—anappointment. Can't cancel it—"

She thought, swiftly: "A girl?" She reached up to him and put her two hands on his shoulders. And gazed at him soulfully, appealingly.

"Jimmy, you WON'T disappoint me. You promised me. You promised!"

He tried to argue with her, but Vina was insistent.

Finally weary, he yielded to her pleading.

Next morning he telephoned Kitty at her office. He apologized for calling the tentative engagement off.

Her heart sank like a piece of lead.

"This office is just about as cheery as a morgue!" announced Irma Paintor.

It was noon on Saturday. The day was brilliant. Thank the Lord she didn't have to set foot in Diggs & Carter's again till Monday morning!

That moping little Kitty!

With a quick impulse Irma put her head on Kitty's. "Don't mope, sweetheart. Men aren't worth it. Don't let anybody make a fool out of you! Come with me with a little of their own medicine!"

Kitty walked past her towards the door. Her lips were shaking.

Irma following her into the dressing room, said:

"Frank Hinkler's got an important out-of-town client with him today. Or anyway, a prospect," whatever that may mean. He asked me to bring you along to lunch . . ."

They came for her to the cottage. In Frank Hinkler's automobile. It was half-past three, and Kitty was working in the garden, tying up some rose bushes.

"Oh, Mrs. Grayson, we called to take Kitty for a ride," called Irma at this moment, when Kitty's mother—who had seen the arrivals from a window—came down to the gate.

Thereupon, Irma presented Frank Hinkler and his out-of-town client, with a great air.

Mrs. Grayson was impressed with their appearance. They were well-dressed, stylish-looking fellows; affable and easy-mannered. It seemed as they were driving out to a big, afternoon charity affair.

"It's for the benefit of the hospitals—one of those outdoor fetes, you know," explained Frank Hinkler.

"We can drop your daughter back home around 8." The stranger smiled winningly at Mrs. Grayson.

Soon Kitty found herself in the back seat of Frank Hinkler's machine. The man from the Middle West was beside her. He was a pleasant fellow, and Kitty soon lifted a little as the car fairly flew over the roads.

They reached the Timkin's estate. Big marquees dotted the greensward.

Kitty got out of the car and moved forward with her escort.

"Fond of music? Let's get Frank and Miss Paintor and go in and listen a bit."

But Kitty scarcely heard the suggestion. She had just seen, over the heads of some women, the handsome face of Jimmie Barron.

Kitty sat in the stuffy, crowded tent with the man from the Middle West beside her. And listened to Vina Byrne sing old Italian airs.

Yes, it was the same girl she had seen that night with Jimmie Barron! The same blue eyes, the demurely arranged gold hair . . .

"Miss Vina Byrne" was printed on the program.

And it was for this girl—for this occasion of being near her—that he had broken the engagement with herself!

Had Jimmie Barron listening? Of course he would be among the crowd who thronged the hot tent. Vina's blue eyes seemed to fasten on one spot. That liquid glance . . . was it for him?

"Say, it's mighty warm in here. What do you say if we take a stroll?" Frank Hinkler's customer was shifting in his chair uneasily.

Kitty got up, glad of the reprieve.

Without seeing him, she brushed right past Jimmy Barron at the exit of the tent.

Kitty was anxious to get away alone.

Politely her escort made the necessary denials. She waived it aside. She even fibbed a little, saying: "Oh, I see a girl I know. I'll run along to her. You go in with Mr. Hinkler. Tell Irma I've seen a friend of mine."

She scurried down the path. The girl she indicated vanished. Kitty pretended to follow her.

From behind came a voice. A delightfully modulated, fascinating man's voice . . .

"Miss Grayson!"

Blood rushed to her face. Her heart pounded. She stopped in her tracks.

It was Jimmie Barron.

"I saw you leave the tent. I wanted so much to speak to you. I was awfully disappointed about the lunch today. Of course you understand that. Let's walk along a we talk. It's infernally hard to get a moment to oneself."

He swung into step beside her, putting a guiding hand under her arm. "This way. Look, there's a quaint little hidden corner to the left of the path."

He led her there. They halted in the shade of an old apple tree all gay with blossoms. He looked down into Kitty's face with lighted, eager eyes. He said, with a funny little catch in his voice: "Now—here—we can have a little privacy!"

Auto Classic to Be Made Feature of New Motion Picture

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS

Copyright, 1929, by Universal Service, Inc.

MILWAUKEE, Wis., May 22—Now that the Kentucky Derby is past history, and the winner has been photographed, described and exploited, the next thing to occupy the attention of the sport-loving public is the 500-mile race to be held May 30 in Indianapolis.

And let me say that the movies are going to share in the thrills of that gala day by filming scenes for "Speedway," a Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer racing thriller. The spectators will likewise get their money's worth for in addition to a cameraman and Harry Beaumont, the director, William Haines, Anita Page, Karl Dane and Ernest Torrence will be on hand to furnish an extra treat for the movie fans.

The Indianapolis Motor Speedway will be used for sequences during the pre-race practice with the scenes of the actual race filled into the completed talkie. I suppose the noise and excitement of this much discussed race will also figure in the talkie for nothing that can be qualified as noise ever escapes the microphone.

THE honor of being a villain in "Tin Pan Alley," Norma Talmadge's next picture, has been wrested from Gilbert Roland and handed to John Wray, who plays the same role that he had in the stage production.

Gilbert need not weep, for he gets the role of hero, and after all he has been hero so many times for Norma that the public probably would resent his playing a heavy.

I am not the only one who has to pound a typewriter to the accompaniment of singing train rails, for Wray is among the most, and while on the way he is trying to prepare the script so that "Tin Pan Alley" may go into production next week. I forgot to say that Wray is an author as well as an actor, and he has "Alibi" to his credit.

WILL somebody tell me why the movies show poor judgment so many times? Paramount paid an enormous sum for the privilege of bringing the screen "Burlesque," one of the most popular Broadway plays. After spending all this money, the title will be changed to "The Dance of Life." Why buy plays because of their reputation and then change their names—really it seems absurd.

"The Constant Wife" is another example of nut-like practice. First it was called "The Marriage Holiday" and now it is to be known as "Charming Sinners." Why not "The Constant Wife" as it was originally christened when Ethel Barrymore chose it for a recent stage vehicle.

IF only Mack Sennett could bring Mabel Normand back and put her in a remade version of "Mickey," it would be a wonderful thing, but Mabel has been sick so long and away from the screen so many months that it seems to be a Herculean task even for the indomitable Sennett.

He planned, you see, to remake "Mickey," which was one of the most popular comedies ever made by Miss Normand, and he has told friends that if Mabel's health permits he would like to have her play the part she played in the original version . . . if only her health permits, but, alas, she has been ill so long that even the most optimistic ones fear that her return to the screen isn't possible.

LUPE VELEZ is said to have looked over all of the feminine prospects for "The Virginian," and to have passed judgment on all of them, not that we expect Pare's liege lady any attention to Lupe, but it is interesting to know that of all the possible leading ladies for Gary Cooper, she approved of Mary Brian, who had been chosen to play the girl in "The Virginian." Whether or not Mary will consider her approval a compliment I do not know. Perhaps she would have considered it more of a compliment if Lupe had been jealous. Girls are funny that way.

* * *

SOME six months ago we reported violent disapproval of Fay Wray, quiet and demure, as Gary Cooper's co-starring partner. We said at the time that it would be better if Gary Cooper had played brother and sister. To our surprise, our mail was flooded with letters from fans all over the country who agreed with us. Shortly afterward Paramount dissolved the team of Cooper and Wray. Philip Holmes and Jean Arthur are now being teamed in "Youth Has Its Fling," a modern story with dialogue. Victor Schertzinger will direct. We will tell better why I think of these two after we see the picture.

ANY film studio today without a music department would be classed as hopelessly old-fashioned and terribly out of date. We never used to pay any attention to sound of any sort in the old days, but times have changed since outher way a girl. Now one of the highly sought-after jobs is head of the music department.

Victor Baravalle, who directed the music for "Three Cheers" and "Rio Rita" has just achieved that title at Radio Pictures. Speaking of Radio Pictures, James Ashmore Creelman has had a piano moved into his apartment so that he can hear the tunes of "Hit the Deck," while he is at breakfast, dinner and luncheon. He is adapting it, and naturally, being a smart boy, he wants to familiarize himself with the musical score.

SNAPSHOTS of Hollywood collected at random by an observer: Lina Basquette and Al Hall attending the Hollywood fights together. Walter Huston arriving in Hollywood. Charles Farrell entering his yacht in the races at Catalina. Gary Cooper exhibiting a new diamond ring presented to him by Lupe Velez for his birthday. Janet Gaynor and Lydell Peck stopping at Hedda Hopper's manors to appear together. Edwin Carewe luncheoning with Rita Carewe and another daughter at the Montemartre. Ann Pennington presenting a perfect picture of wholesomeness after a hard day at the studio.

That's all today. See you tomorrow.

DO YOU KNOW THAT

The statement is often made that England is slowly vanishing—falling into the sea. Exactly the opposite is the case, for whatever happened in the past England is at present gaining more on the sea floors.

Standing 11,500 feet above sea-level in the Bernese Oberland the Jungfrau Joch Hotel is the highest hotel in Europe.

Lee School Outing

More than 300 members of the Martha Lee School of Practical Cookery enjoyed another get-together outing at the Weber Duck Inn at Wrentham.

This was their third visit to this popular motor inn, in addition to a luncheon at Pini's Restaurant at the Hotel Brunswick. Everyone was enthusiastic in their praise of the food and service, as well as the beauty of the ride to Wrentham in the New England Transportation Co.'s busses.

After the luncheon, bridge was enjoyed and also a tour of the interesting Weber Duck Farm.

The arrangements were in charge of Mrs. Caroline Brooks, of 15 Leonard st., Somerville, and Miss Alice Barlow, 1246 Commonwealth ave., Allston.

CARMAN MADE MAJOR U. S. R. C

Capt. Travers D. Carman, Boston advertising man, has been appointed major in the U. S. Quartermaster Corps. Reserves according to an order just received here from the War Department.

Major Carman won his oak leaves after 10 consecutive years of service. Commissioned a captain on January 7, 1919 he has since been one of the most active Reserve Officers in the Corps.

He became interested in military affairs at the outbreak of the World war in 1917 when he was appointed chairman of the draft board No. 1 of Yonkers, N. Y., although he was exempt from the draft himself because of age and marriage, he applied for admission to the army and finally in October, 1918, after months of persistent effort, he qualified as a captain in the Motor Transport Corps.

He is also actively interested in the welfare of the former service men, particularly disabled veterans.

Capt. T. D. Carman

U. S. OPENS WAR DEBT PARLEY WITH FRANCE

Washington, May 22 (AP)—Administration officials have informally called attention of the French ambassador to the situation surrounding the coming due on August 1 of the $400,000,000 war supplies debt, inquiring if the French government was in position to take action toward ratification of the $4,000,000,000 French war debt.

The situation was presented to Ambassador Claudel to enable him to inform his government of difficulties that might be experienced if action by the French was delayed until after the special session of Congress recesses. The war supplies debt, for which this government holds bonds of the French government, matures August 1, and, unless Congress makes some provision for delaying the payment or the war debt agreement is ratified, it must be paid.

If, on the other hand, the French government feels that ratification of the war debt were possible, the administration could present the question to Congress, which alone can authorize a delay in collecting the war supply debt until ratification of the war debt settlement.

Bishop McConnell in Unitarian Talk

Bishop Francis M. McConnell, Methodist bishop of the New York area and president of the Federal Council of Churches of Christ in America, will address the Unitarian anniversary meeting on Thursday evening at the Arlington St. Church on "Some Reflections on Public Opinion."

This is one of the first occasions when a Methodist has appeared before Unitarians assembled in annual conference.

Floods Endanger City of Bagdad

London, May 22 (AP)—A Basra, Irak, dispatch to the Daily Mail said the city of Bagdad was imperiled by floods on the Tigris river. The Euphrates river also has risen, and many deaths and widespread destruction along the two streams were reported.

Hoover Calls for Oil Conference

Washington, May 22 (AP)—President Hoover has invited the governors of western oil producing states to send representatives to a preliminary conference at Colorado Springs June 10 to consider the possibility of creating an interstate compact for conservation of oil.

Ex-Congressman Dies

Buffalo, N. Y., May 22 (AP)—Charles R. Ely, former New York city, former congressman, is dead.

$250,000 SUIT FOR DAMAGES GOES TO TRIAL

Painesville, O., May 22 (AP)—Helen Buschmann of Westfield, Mass., former Lake Erie College student, will be unable to take the stand during the hearing of the $250,000 damage suit filed in her behalf against the Great Lakes Stage Co., her guardian, Luther E. Hollister of Westfield announced. The girl would probably be in the courtroom when the case opens today, he said, but because of her inability to talk above a low whisper she would not testify.

Miss Buschmann was struck by a Great Lakes Stage Co. bus at Mentor, O., Jan. 13, 1928. She suffered a fractured skull and was semi-conscious at Lake County Memorial Hospital for six months. She returned to Westfield last August. Hollister said she had not fully recovered the use of her arms.

Pope's First Leave Postponed to June

Vatican City, May 22 (INS)—On account of the shortness of the time for preparations, the first departure of Pope Pius XI from the Vatican has been postponed from May 26, it was learned this afternoon. It is likely that the pontiff will make his first exit from the confines of the Vatican on June 7.

The pontiff was to have appeared upon the steps of St. Peter's during the Corpus Christi procession on May 30 to bless the crowd in St. Peter's sq.

LARGEST EVENING
CIRCULATION IN NEW ENGLAND

Delay in Flood Control

The Mississippi rises two, three, four feet. The Red River casts a flood menace over two States. The great winds set the waters of Lake Michigan on a rampage, with consequent harm to shipping.

Daily one reads of the elements going on the loose, but unless the tumult is at our doorstep, we think little of it, and pass on to read something else.

Yet the roster of landslides, washouts, floods and the like form a considerable part of the year's news. The average citizen dismisses it with the thought that what can't be helped must be endured. The more thoughtful man knows that while we have triumphed much, the battle with nature continues. The war will never end.

Water and wind keep up a tremendous war of attrition on the earth, and if levees and Zeppelins and railroads get in the way, they must suffer. The Mississippi and the mighty, heaving Atlantic are still too clever for man. Man must compromise with them. He will compromise with them 10,000 years hence.

Compromising, in the modern sense, is a big engineering job. And flood control is the biggest. Three hundred convicts have been sent with shovels to patch up the levee near St. Louis. This is the proper emergency measure for the moment, for it makes citizens feel something is being done.

When the Yangtze gets angry and swells, the Chinese burn several sticks of punk and beat gongs. When the Mississippi gets ornery, we send along convicts with shovels.

Sometimes it dawns on us that flood control demands efforts more effective than that, and it is a job twenty times the magnitude of the Panama Canal, and should be begun at once. This delay is costing the United States altogether too much in money and lives.

Ancient Police Methods

Whether Capone captured Philadelphia or Philadelphia Capone is not important. The main thing is that for a year the streets of Chicago, lacking the rattle of Capone's expert artillery, will be silent and dull save for those noises and incidents made by ordinary non-shooting citizens.

If it is true that Capone broke into jail, it is significant that he passed up New York as a possibility and selected Philadelphia.

It must have been a bitter blow that he was not able to give his patronage to his home town and found all the best jails of Chicago closed to him after a life devoted to putting the city on the front page.

Capone's selection of Philadelphia was probably due to the fact that there is always plenty of room in the jails of that city. The political system of Philadelphia from the days of Matt Quay down has insured plenty of room in the local jails for OUTSIDERS.

The whole Capone incident, whatever the truth as to his arrest, is a terrible comment on the fact that practically the entire country is suffering under police administration that is fifty years behind the times. Crime is always up to date, while innovations in the police administration come only after repeated evidences of the futility of antiquated methods.

The establishment at the University of Chicago of a chair of "Police Administration" for the scientific study of police work and the fact that Northwestern University is to follow suit may be an evidence that we are beginning to realize that organized crime is generations ahead of organized detection.

Indians' Strange Religion

Professor Forde, Fellow in Anthropology of the University of California, finds in the religion of Yuma Indians, on the Lower Colorado River, a remarkable resemblance to the Christian religion.

The Yumas believe that the divine son and their God Kukumat was the Savior of the Yumas.

The Yumas' god, however, did not teach servility and righteousness, but physical courage and power to endure torture.

Christian fathers, penetrating Tibet many centuries ago, were horrified to find that one Eastern religion antedating Christianity possessed a trinity and other Christian features. They concluded that Satan had arranged the resemblance to annoy Christians.

Religions express the emotions of races that practice them. Early missionaries among North American red men, emphasized chapters of the Old Testament, telling how the Lord of Hosts won his battles, beat his enemies, and killed them off in great numbers.

That converted the Indians.

They liked a god that could fight. The Sermon on the Mount would have left them cold.

Hoover Knows How to Pick

President Hoover does signal honor to Massachusetts by appointing from this state two members to the national law enforcement commission.

Miss Ada L. Comstock, president of Radcliffe College, and Roscoe Pound, dean of Harvard Law School, will serve without pay for two years in a work considered by the President to be the most important before the administration.

Considerable personal sacrifice necessarily follows acceptance of such an appointment, but the President will find his Massachusetts appointees eager to submerge self-interest in any move to safeguard the nation's welfare.

The Fishing and Fly Screen Season

By FRANKLIN COLLIER

GET YOUR WORK ALL DONE UP AHEAD, OTTO AND ALL TAKE YOU UP TO MY FISHING CAMP OVER THE WEEK-END.
YOU'LL HAVE A PEACH OF A TIME. THE FISHING IS GREAT!
WILL I?
FAR INTO THE NIGHT
ALL HAPPY AN EVERYTHIN
MAY LOVES T' HAVE ME GET OUR WITH THE BOYS IN A GOOD TIME WAIT TILL SHE HEARS ABOUT THIS FISHIN' TRIP.
GUESS, MAY! BILL THATCHER IS GONTER KEV ME UP TO HIS FISHIN' CAMP OVER TH' WEEK-END! BIG TIME!
GEORGE GRIMM IS GOIN, NICK FLATLEY, AN' —
IS THAT SO? INDEED! WHAT ABOUT ME? WHAT AM I GOING TO DO?
THE FRONT LAWN NEEDS MOWING SO BADLY THAT PEOPLE THINK WE ARE RAISING A WHEAT CROP.
ARE YOU GOING TO LEAVE THE DOUBLE WINDOWS ON ALL SUMMER?
WHY, THE SCREENS SHOULD HAVE BEEN PAINTED A MONTH AGO AND THE ASH CANS ARE ALL FULL, AND— YOU WANT TO GO FISHING WITH A LOT OF ROUGH NECKS
OVER THE WEEK-END

YOU'VE A NUMBER, AN YOU BET YOUR WIFE HAS GOT IT EVERY HOPE FER A REPRIEVE IS ALL IN VAIN MATRIMONY IS TH' CRIME FER WHICH YOURE DOIN' TIME WHEN YOUR ANKLE WEARS TH' BALL AN CHAIN!

New York Day by Day

By O. O. McINTYRE

NEW YORK, May 22—Intimate and cosy tearooms and "Southern" dinner places are graying the heads of chain restaurant stockholders as well indeed as proprietors of fashionable cafes.

The profits of one of the largest chain was in real estate swap. Otherwise it operated at a loss for the fiscal year.

Since the new traffic rules debauched motor travel out of midtown at the "dinner hour" the home cooking places have prospered as never before while places in the Whalenized zone suffered a corresponding loss of patronage. Parking privileges off the beaten path were a boon to little fellows.

Most of these have an ownership arrangement that has done much to enhance popularity. The manager, who acts as headwaiter, and the cook are joint proprietors, and not only the food but service are under proprietory scrutiny. And prices are within reason.

Meals are of a well balanced table d'hote variety, ranging from $1 to $2 with the $1.50 sort getting the big play. There is no music, no cover charge or hat checking annoyance, and servers are darkies or comely waitresses.

The average dinner offers a choice of two soups, a fruit cocktail or oysters in season. There are three or four choices of meat, two vegetables, a salad, coffee and a half dozen tempting home made desserts not found in most cafes. The service is casual, but not so slow as to be irritating.

Tipping is less than usually expected in most cafes. For years such restaurants were frequented largely by working girls, widows on small incomes and the so-called white-collar class. But lately the clientele has entirely changed. It comes from Park and other aristocratic avenues.

Smart cars are at the door. Before dinner parties in evening dress are numerous. No liquor is procurable in the majority of these dining places nor is bringing it in from the outside encouraged. The aim is for wholesome food in quiet surroundings.

A well-known blind character of the lower East Side known as "The Feeler" was glorified in a play this season on Broadway. "The Feeler," with that compensation in the instinct of the sightless, can distinguish friends by their hand clasp. He sells lead pencils at a subway kiosk, but, being a man of erudition, spends much of his spare time tutoring children of the slums.

A gentleman who survived three years of tropical fevers on the poisonous west coast of Africa is returning there shortly. After a year of sampling Broadway waters he says: "I feel my system is prepared now for the worst cesspools in the jungle."

And there is the story of the chorus lady who spent her after midnights imbibing in the Broadway grottoes of joy. Rushed to the hospital for an emergency operation, the surgeons found chloroform had no effect whatever. And ether just made her bright-eyed and chatty.

My favorite name for the season among chorus girls is that of one who has named herself Mahatma Marionette. And the chorus boy who calls himself Florens Florentine deserves a bouquet of pansies or a swift kick or something.

Near the Pennsylvania station is a cubicle hot and cold drink stand fashioned after a Paris bistro with a circular bar, high chairs and tables for dominoes and cubito. Bar maids are there, too, and it receives quite a play.

From a magazine for writers: "McIntyre is one of the younger newspaper columnists, being barely 30."

How long has this been going on?

And a Sunday paper headlines: "Honeymoons Grow Shorter!" Due to marriages. And it's an ailing pun at best.

The four-year-old New York boy reported smoking three cigars and a pack of cigarettes daily surprises "we boys of the old brigade" who at his age were not even allowed to play with a match. Eheu, as Aunt Het used to sigh, fugaces!

Meditations of a Wife

By HELEN ROWLAND

"WHY do you take love so seriously?" writes "A Coed." "Don't you know that passion never lasts? Isn't it foolish, not to say dangerous, to take it too seriously, in this enlightened day?"

Just a moment, please, Co-ed. You're in the right church, but the wrong pew. Call the interpreter. You and I don't speak the same language.

When I say "dinner" to my pet dog, I mean just roast beef. But when I say dinner to an enlightened, cultured person, like yourself, I mean hors d'oeuvres and soup and fish and capon and salad and French pastry and demi-tasse.

And when I speak of "love" in this column, I mean defiance and romance and affection and sex attraction and companionship and tenderness—the whole menu!

The great trouble with you and your generation is that you are taking passion too seriously—and love too lightly.

The park benches are filled with men and women who took sex too lightly and never could hold a permanent job.

And the sanatoriums are filled with people who took love too lightly and never found a permanent love.

In youth we float from one little job to another and from one little love to another, blindly groping for something, vaguely seeking something—we scarcely know what.

That SOMETHING is our Destiny. And our destiny is the work that will satisfy us and the love that will satisfy us.

The big, permanent JOB—and the big, permanent LOVE.

And until or unless we can find these life is never complete.

All the great sirens of history had One Big Love in their lives, or not one of their lives would have made a story worth writing. All the great lovers the world has known are remembered not so much for their little peccadilloes and light flirtations as for the One Big Love that threw a glamor over their rather shady careers.

All the little loves of youth and all the little jobs of youth are just the hors d'oeuvres of life. Unless something more substantial and more satisfying follows, you are apt to go through life pretty HUNGRY.

Youth is spent in seeking your niche in life—and the average woman's niche is in the right man's arms.

Constantly transplanting love is as foolish as constantly transplanting a rose bush. How can you expect it to do anything but die? But don't mistake infatuation for love. Passion and love are twins, but they are no more identical than snow and Thanksgiving or than youth and happiness. Or than college life and an education?

LISTEN, WORLD!

By ELSIE ROBINSON

I DON'T believe in hell—

And I'm not scared of ghosts—

And a devil more or less means nothing in my young life—

BUT OHMIGOSH HOW AFRAID I AM OF CONSEQUENCES!

I wasn't always afraid of consequences.

If they existed at all, which I doubted, I was sure I could sidestep them. Or kiss them away. But I've learned different.

YOU CAN WIGGLE OUT OF JAIL SENTENCES, AND EVADE THE TAX COLLECTOR, AND EVEN SOMETIMES THROW THE TRAFFIC COP OFF YOUR TRAIL—

BUT YOU CANNOT GET AWAY FROM THE CONSEQUENCES OF YOUR OWN ACTS! THEY'LL CATCH UP WITH YOU AND EXACT PAYMENT THOUGH YOU FLEE FROM CAPETOWN TO KAMCHATKA.

FOR YOUR CONSEQUENCES ARE A PART OF YOU—THEY ARE ROOTED IN YOUR OWN WEAKNESS AND LAZINESS AND COWARDICE. AND AS LONG AS YOU CARRY YOUR WEAKNESS WITH YOU THE CONSEQUENCES WILL COME, TOO.

Take me, for example.

I'm one of those easy going fools who can never say NO. I'm always giving in to someone to save a row—letting some one put something over on me—accepting some sort of pesty responsibility just to be obliging. And what's the consequence?

The consequence is that my program is always crammed up with a lot of confusion that I should have eliminated at the jump and I have those pesty responsibilities hung around my neck, like dogooned albatrosses, for the rest of my days.

Every time I think about it I get mad and sorry for myself and try to put the blame on other people. But the truth is, I've no one to blame but myself.

I've no more right to get sloppy good-natured than I have to get sloppy drunk. I have no more right to plaster unnecessary responsibilities on my life than I have to plaster unnecessary mortgages on my house.

It isn't Christian Charity—it's plain darn foolishness. It's up to me to keep affairs in order. It's up to me to prevent people from poaching on me and pestering me.

AND IF I DON'T DO IT I'LL HAVE TO SUFFER THE CONSEQUENCES.

Life's just one consequence after the other—

And they're all of your own sowing.

If you'll look back over your career you'll find that you, yourself, are responsible for all the misery you've suffered—barring unavoidable accidents and deaths.

It's mighty humiliating to realize that, but it's also helpful.

For it makes you realize that you have only one Bad Actor to watch—

You don't have to watch the devil nor do you have to watch your neighbor, for neither of them can start any really vital ructions in your life—

YOU, YOURSELF, ARE YOUR ONLY ENEMY!

Medbury Says—

By JOHN P. MEDBURY

A NEW YORK woman has had her face lifted 10 times. She must be trying to break an altitude record.

Efficiency Experts

An economical girl is one who always gets married in the same dress.

Wonders of Nature

Men used to drift into bad habits but nowadays they go into them at full speed.

American Tragedies

The absent-minded doctor who took ether before he operated on himself.

Look Before You Creep

When a man puts his foot down at home, he should always take his shoes off first to keep from waking his wife up.

You're Right

If the New York shows get any hotter, the theaters will have to install another asbestos curtain.

The BAER Facts

By ARTHUR "BUGS" BAER

SOME public spirited agitator stole an 18-pound ham from John Plummer of Indiana.

John advertised his intense desolation by a gnashing of bridgework and a wailing of teeth.

An 18-pound ham is the noblest work of man. When Darwin sought to prove that we descended from animals he might have pointed greater glory if he had given us the ratio in sandwiches.

The days may get longer but a union dinner hour is always the same. John missed that 18-pound ham like a stranded clam misses high tide.

When Spring arrived with flaming breath and apple blossoms jammed the air, John got word of his sugar-cured trophy.

It arrived by rural freak delivery in a beautiful government wrapper embroidered with cancelled stamps and postoffice stencils.

The crook couldn't eat the hambone. So his conscience bothered him.

Now, what good is a hambone unless it is inside a ham?

Of course, a hambone has some intrinsic value. A school-teacher can use it as a blackboard pointer. A drum major can swing it in spangled pride as he leads the village parade down the main stem on the Fourth. Properly inscribed and engraved it would make a splendid acquisition to a doghouse.

But is the plunderer less a thief because he has returned the chassis of a splendid meal?

You can strip a tree of its plums and it will again flower its bounty on the chain store systems of this nation. You can break the claw from a crab and it will grow a new set of emergency beakes. But once a ham is swimming in champagne sauce you can bet that it will never reach the shore again.

Therefore, it seems to us that the ham remains stolen. This is a point of law we would like to have cleared up even if the district attorney is forced to wave a threatening hambone at the 12 chauffeurs of our transient justice.

Money has been stolen and money has been returned. But what restitution can be made when an incognito ham surrenders to an unknown appetite?

The returning of the hambone is not payment in full. It is merely a souvenir and not a receipt.

This incident looks like one worthy of the intellectual evasions of a Clarence Darrow. We have seen Clarence defend murderers, manglers and other distinguished clients and we know that he could get the hambone off with a suspended sentence.

WORDS OF THE WISE MEN

Science is the great antidote to the poison of enthusiasm and superstition. —Smith.

He is an eloquent man who can treat humble subjects with delicacy, lofty things impressively and moderate things temperately. —Cicero.

To be 70 years young is sometimes far more cheerful and hopeful than to be 40 years old. —Holmes.

All the arts appertaining to man have a certain common bond and are, as it were, connected by a sort of relationship. —Cicero.

Falsehood flies and truth comes limping after it, so that when men come to be undeceived it is too late. —Swift.

Wisdom alone is true ambition's aim.
Wisdom the source of virtue, and of fame.
Obtained with labor, for mankind employed.
And then, when most you share it, best enjoyed.
—Whitehead.

THE RHYMING OPTIMIST

By ALINE MICHAELIS

WHEN I am tired of all gay things, of laughter like the lift of wings, of carfree throngs and joyous songs, I want the peace the ocean brings.

When I am worn with fret and care when folly greets me everywhere, I need but this: The white spray's kiss, the soft caress of salt-sweet air.

When I am vexed with little tasks and weary of life's futile masks, I must be free to seek the sea, to find there all my spirit asks.

By mountains tall, by meadows wide I wander still unsatisfied, till far away, I catch, some day, the rhythmic whisper of the tide.
